THE CONFERENCE ROOM WAS packed.

Shoulder to shoulder.

Perfume clouds, not enough deodorant, elbows knocking.

I found a seat near the back, not around the long table in the cente room but in a corner, my coworkers Lani and Brandon on either side o

"They're going to have to knock down some walls," Brandon drahis Georgia-met-Chicago accent.

THE MOMENT I STEPPED into my condo, every last ounce of peace the weekend was sucked out of me.

The stench of weed hit me as hard as the music blaring from my system. Thank Christ for being in the penthouse or my neighbors wou been up in arms. If the roles were reversed, I would have been too.

I tossed my heavy backpack down on the floor in the entry. Not m but I'd put it away after I dealt with the music. Then I'd deal with Mile Clicking the music off, I scanned my living room. Two glasses of vector the coffee table, one with lipstick on the rim. The end of a joint in a Beautumbler half filled with melting ice. Something pink and lacy on the catie pointing like an arrow to the hallway.

This way to the asshole.

I'd left for the weekend, not telling anyone but my assistant I'd be reach. Camping on my own, something I'd done since childhood. I'd the quiet to get my head ready for what was to come, and there was like being alone, under the stars, to make everything else feel small, in me.

In my world, where my role was big—the boss, creator, CEO—hav reminder I was nothing more than a piece of dust in the grand sch things kept me grounded. It gave me peace.

I remained unaffected by his prodding. I'd heard it one too many times.

"Aren't you leaving?"

"Nah." He settled deeper into the couch. "Think I'll hang out for a while. You won't see me for a whole week, so I'll give you the opportunity to get your fill to tide you over until next time."

Exasperated, I pushed up from the couch and headed toward my bedroom. "I'm going to shower. You can go now. Leave the key on the counter on your way out."

Miles called out to me. "In your dreams!"

He truly had no idea how right he was.

THREE WEEKS POST-GHOSTING, POST-MOVE, post—new life was the day:

My first day at my new job.

In some ways, things were easier. My new apartment was gorge course, there was nothing but the best for Elliot Levy's little sister. The what his property manager had told me.

Downtown.

Spacious two bedrooms.

Check, check, check.

Saoirse danced into my bedroom without knocking. But then, we open-door policy: as long as our doors were open, either of us was w to dance on in. A throwback to our college days. We were picking up we'd left off as roommates.

When I moved to Chicago three years ago, I never thought I'd there, living with Saoirse again. My feelings were still mixed about back, but living with Saoirse? I wasn't ambivalent in any way. She v

"Oh, you look good." She circled her finger in the air. "Do a twirl pretty."

Another tradition. Before going out, we'd always hype each other same thing applied for job interviews, dates, first days...

I twirled for her, needing the hype now more than ever, and sh whistled.

"Nice, honey. You look ready to go out and make that bank. Tit tittying nicely."

I snorted a laugh and cupped my breasts. I'd gone somewhat conse for my first day. Black cigarette pants, a white V-neck that barely shous. Of hint of cleavage but did mold around my ample chest, and an ovenat was men's style tweed blazer.

"Do I want my titties tittying at the office?"

She arched a brow. "Come on, Lisie. We both know your boobs are working overtime. They have no choice but to be banging."

She spoke the truth. My breasts entered a room before I did. As mu tried to downplay it, there was no real way to disguise the roundness had an body. Not that I should have had to, but I'd need some time to get had an where I'd been before the GIF.

After Weston was gone and I had time to go over what we'd talked about in my head, I realized he'd never explained why he'd been leaving the Postits.

I made a mental note to ask him at work.

And for once, I was looking forward to seeing him again.

CEOS WERE BUSY. I knew that.

But after seeing Weston around so often during my first two w Andes, I supposed I had developed false expectations. This week different story. I hadn't even caught a glimpse of him in the elevator.

That was why I smiled so big when I arrived at my desk on Thursda Post-it was waiting for me.

Alfred Hitchcock was frightened of eggs.

I sputtered a laugh. Now that I knew these were from Weston, the hadn't admitted it explicitly, I looked forward to receiving them. He'd one each day this week, each with a random fact that had nothing to elephants.

Miles strolled by, whistling softly. He stopped in front of me, rapped knuckles on my desk. "What's that little smile about?"

I crinkled my nose. I'd forgiven him, sure, but we weren't friends. I certain I even wanted to be friends with him.

"Nothing." I tried to hide the Post-it under my hands, but he spotted His brow lifted. "I didn't leave that one." "I know you didn't."

"Who did?"

I shrugged. I was working on regaining my ability to trust people be doubted I'd ever trust Miles Aldrich. If I did, it would certainly tak than a few days to happen.

He clutched his heart. "I'm wounded you're keeping secrets from Lisie."

WESTON TOOK ME TO a sushi restaurant a few blocks from headquarters. We'd just placed our orders, and so far he had managed his facial expressions on an even keel.

He clasped his hands on the table. "I'm sorry again for last week."

He'd always had nice hands. Long fingers. Neatly trimmed nails. Be they were essentially hand porn. Veins stood out like wild rivers a beneath his skin made golden by the sun. The calluses on his palafingers belied his position as CEO. Weston must have still loved specified outdoors.

"Who told you it was a problem then?"

His mouth twitched. God, were his lips sexy. I'd forgotten how bottom one was. Full and pink. He was probably a great kisser, w anatomy and his perfectionism.

"Ex-girlfriends," he answered, pulling me right back to reality. Wes a lot of ex-girlfriends.

"Okay, now I'm intrigued. Spill what your problem is."

His lips pulled into a half smile. "I've been told many, many times I single-minded. When I'm concentrating on a project or deep in my wo not aware of anything outside of it. In the past, I've missed reservation forgotten plans for days because of my hyperfocus."

"Ahhh..." I picked up the wrapper from my chopsticks and began it into a small square. "Yes, I can see why that would be a problem f plethora of girlfriends."

A deep, full laugh burst from him. "Plethora? Really?"

Still, he was a nice guy. A good guy. I'd give him one more try. I wasn't feeling it, I'd let him down easy. I'd never be the girl to drag out just to have someone in my life.

I sat up, taking a deep pull from my water bottle. It was time heading back. I had a long walk ahead of me.

Climbing to my feet, I stretched my arms over my head. That nap has guessed exactly what I'd needed.

I leaned down to grab my backpack, but a band of iron caught me lour had could grab it. No, not iron. Strong, unyielding arms wrapped arou shoulders from behind and yanked me backward into something hard. 7ith the bells rang in my ears, but before I could scream, a big hand cove said no mouth.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

Elize

THE MORNING SUN SHONE like a spotlight on the unlocked do separated my room from Weston's. I stared at it from my bed, my covers pulled up around my ears, willing myself to get up and lock it.

But it would be fruitless. If Weston wanted inside my room ag would undoubtedly find a way, lock or not.

Last night had probably been a one-off anyway.

It was good that it was. Smart. The best decision.

That was what I told myself until I flung myself out of bed to trudg shower and the dull ache between my legs made my breath hitch.

Oh, Weston. Why did he have to be so...good?

It had been the best sex of my life. I couldn't remember a time I been so desired on a visceral level.

I brushed my teeth while the shower warmed up. The woman starii at me in the mirror had been thoroughly fucked. My hair was in a ra on top of my head. There were bite marks and bruises all over my chodangerously close to my neck. My lips were still a little swollen ar pink.

Weston Aldrich had marked me, and he'd done it with purpose.

He'd wanted me to see in my reflection.

It had been his intent for me to feel him when I walked.

Guys like him, with giant dicks and egos to match, were probably with testosterone. It was all they could do not to beat their chests a chance they got. Giving me hickeys and bowing my legs during sex socially acceptable equivalent.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

Elize

BY THE TIME OUR car pulled up in front of our building, my lips fe and bitten. Staid and serious, Weston Aldrich could be an animal w was in the mood, and he'd gone feral on me.

God, I was going to miss it.

At least we still had today.

Weston climbed out of the car first, holding his leather messenger front of the bulge in his pants, so he didn't scar innocent passersby! Snickering quietly, I slid out behind him. He took my hand, helping stand and onto the sidewalk.

While we waited for the driver to grab our bags from the trun simmered between us. His gaze had gone molten as he stared at my slips.

At the sound of our names, we turned to find Elliot exiting our buils small smile playing on his lips. It took everything in my power not taway from Weston when we were already a couple feet apart.

"Elliot? What are you doing here?" When he reached me, I leaned to kiss him on the cheek. He gave me a side hug before stepping bashaking Weston's hand.

"Are you really surprised I would want to see you after you were a so long?" he asked.

I chuckled, despite my plummeting stomach. So much for one moi "Three nights, El. That's barely a blip."

He rocked back on his heels, his hands tucked into his pockets. "So, to hang out with my sister. Do you have a better offer?"

I willed myself not to glance at Weston. "Your idea of hanging the better involve sitting on my couch watching movies because that's activity I have the energy for."

He laughed, turning his attention to Weston. "It sounds like working your employees to the bone, Aldrich."

In my periphery, Weston went rigid. "You know me. I like to m for life. work environment as painful as possible and keep my employees of down so they can never leave," he deadpanned.

Weston started for my bag, but Elliot beat him to it. "I've got k, heat things. You can head up to your place and do whatever it is you do swollen"

Weston and I finally exchanged a glance. He smirked, tother. disappointment was palpable. "Count my money. That's what I do what alone."

"Make sure not to get any paper cuts," I quipped halfheartedly.

As much as I'd protested, I'd wanted that final time with him, and would never happen.

WESTON: Where are you?

I wasn't surprised to see his text, but it did make my blood heat been back from our trip for two weeks and had spent almost every together. Some nights, we had dinner; others, when he worked lawatched stupid TV and snuggled on his couch.

Yeah. Snuggled.

We'd been saying we were just friends while holding on to each of life rafts. My social life was Weston. My hobbies were Weston an Weston.

It wasn't wise and probably not healthy, but I told myself I could any time. We were just making up for the years we hadn't been close didn't kiss or have sex, it didn't count.

So what if my body thrummed, and when I left his place, I went strbed and took care of my pulsing clit with his face on my mind and hi on my lips. So what if Weston's joggers seemed to be permanently ten

I quickly replied, then set my phone face down on the table in front giving my attention to Rebecca and Simon. They were on their second of margaritas and well on their way to getting shit-faced. They'd been me to go out with them for ages, and it had been on the tip of my to turn them down once again, but I'd thought better of it. They wer friends to me, had been from day one, and I didn't want to lose that I'd become mildly obsessed with my boss.

Rebecca's husband, Sam, had just arrived from his office a few away, and since we were both mostly sober, we were laughing at their

THE NIGHT WAS CLEAR.

The air was warm.

Decorations were over the top.

Elise was happy.

My brother was trashed.

Elise was dancing with Saoirse, Rebecca, Simon, and the random Miles had brought. I was sending him death glares.

At least Miles's state of inebriation was taking my mind off the fact had to pretend to be just friends with Elise. It sucked, and I did not wisdom behind it. Lying would only compound Elliot's anger when him.

Elliot and Sam had some common ground, discussing Denver rea development. While everyone was busy and happy, I walked up Miles. He was pouring himself another drink.

"You don't need that," I hissed.

"It's a party." He grinned at me, tipping the cup into his mouth should have fun, Westie."

Westie. It grated on me every time he said it. Even worse, that he ar were such great pals, he'd gotten her into the habit of calling me that to "Do you even remember whose party this is?"

Miles blinked at me. "Of course. I'm here to celebrate my best frien Michelle Levy."

"Best friend?" I scoffed. "You're not a very good friend, stu around, making a fool of yourself. How old is your date?"

His unfocused eyes slid to the woman in hot pink who'd accompani "Sabrina is older than me, Westie. She's your age, old man. And the reason I'm stumbling is because I twisted my ankle when Sab and rock climbing this afternoon. I'm mildly blitzed. I wouldn't get tra Lisie's party. I might miss the cake."

I crossed my arms over my chest. Now that I looked at him, he wasted as I'd originally assumed. Nowhere near sober, but not about to make girl out.

"Did you go to a doctor for the ankle?"

He waved me off, taking another long pull from his drink, which see the like straight vodka. "Nah. I'm self-medicating. I'll go tomorrow if we told any better." He chuckled to himself. "By the way, not a good ideal climbing after eating an edible."

Any hope I'd had for him fizzled out in that instant. "You knew bett behind he winked at me. "Sometimes you have to do stupid shit and lead lesson afterward. That's what makes life fun." Then he threw his arm my shoulders. "Now, tell me what we bought Lisie."

WHEN THE KNOCK FINALLY came, I ran for the door. Not caring man of mine was on the other side, I threw open the door and lunged v arms open.

Elliot wrapped his around me and backed me into my apartment.

"I'm sorry," I said into his shoulder.

"You have nothing to be sorry for."

As soon as he said it, the tears I'd been keeping on a tight leash b flood out in uncontrollable rivers.

"You didn't kill him, did you?"

"No." His big palm cupped the back of my head. "I considered it, but I pushed back from him, lightly slapping his cheek. "Don't even it."

He attempted to be stern with me. "Then don't ever keep things from don't like knowing you're even capable of subterfuge."

"Obviously, I'm not very good at it since you figured us out the file we were in the same place together."

"He said your decision to keep me in the dark was mutual."

I wrinkled my nose. "Not at all. He was the one who warned me the we hid it, the worse it would be when you found out."

"I knew it." He let go of me to stalk farther into my apartment convinced my best friend to lie to me, which he's never done. N should be worried about the type of influence you'll have over Weston

I cocked my head. "You don't seem mad."

"I'm...not sure what I am. I don't like the lying."

"Believe me, I don't either. It's unnatural for me to lie to you. But I us to have time, just in case you disapproved, to make sure Weston were solid enough to stand up to that."

"I can't say I do approve." He folded his arms over his chest. "E you have any idea how much he works? He won't be able to give time and attention you deserve. That bothers me, and I think, over will bother you too."

"He's been coming home early." I felt the need to defend Weston,
Elliot wasn't wrong about his track record.

Elliot nodded. "That's good. But when does he do the work that he have done in the office?" When I didn't answer, he went on. "I'm as he brings his work home. A man like him doesn't change, even if he suggest to. I want more than that for you."

"But I had a man who gave me his time and attention, and he still we me." I pulled on Elliot's arms, unfolding them, and squeezed his for "Look, I know who Weston is. I'm not blind. Dear Elise, Unfortunately, I have to cancel our lunch plans today.

It seems going camping for two days without cell service means come back to reality, reality is waiting for me.

Luckily, I made sure to enjoy every minute of our camping trip.

The outdoors will never be the same.

Regretfully,

Dear Grumpy Boss,

That is unfortunate. I was very much looking forward to our lunch Lucky for me, another Aldrich has volunteered to take your place.

Miles says hi, by the way.

Those two days were worth the slap in the face, right? Mine powers wasn't as harsh as the one you experienced, but I'm hitting the running this morning.

Worth it, though. I've never felt more peaceful than I did this w with you.

I hope you have time to take a breath today.

Wistfully,

Elise

One breath. That was all I had time for. I sat back in my chair, sucking pictures of our weekend flashed through my mind. I'd taken Elise to n and she'd been all in. We spent two solid days hiking, fishing, and under the stars.

40-

when I She was easy to be with. So damn easy that when we were apart was more often than I liked, everyone else struck me as drudgery.

It had been a month since her birthday. For Elise and me, that mobeen smooth. Without the looming deadline of telling Elliot hanging o heads, we'd been able to let ourselves sink into our relationship.

Things between Elliot and me were getting better. He was warightfully so since he'd had a front row to my past relationships. Two ago, he'd nearly knocked me out at the gym.

I put my phone down on the mat next to the weights, cursing un breath. Disappointment sat like lead in my gut.

"Troubles?" Luca asked.

"I've got to fly out to California tonight to meet with our tomorrow morning," I answered.

- robably Elliot had stopped lifting, tuning in to our conversation.
- ground "Why is that a problem?" Luca shrugged. "That sounds like a typi for you."
- reekend "Elise and I are supposed to be starting cooking lessons. I'm going to miss them. I have to be in California to meet with my team tonight." Elliot scoffed, wiping his face with a towel. He didn't say anything could almost hear his mind going.

"Oooh, cooking with Elise?" Luca bounced on his toes. "Tell me v is. I'll go with her."

"No," I barked, immediately and violently opposed to the idea. "it in as her and me."

1y spot, "Then you should be here to go with her." Elliot dropped his tov fucking approached where Luca and I were by the weights.

"If I could, I would. Believe me, I'd much rather be here with Eli, which out there dealing with supply chain problems."

His frown deepened. "Two weeks and you're already letting her and had warned her this would happen, and here we go. I have to say, it's soon ver our I expected."

"Come on, Elliot. Elise will understand," Luca chided.

"Sure she will. That's who she is." Elliot met my gaze in the mirror you be spending this evening with Marisol instead of my sister?"

I stiffened at his question. I loathed giving him the answer. "She der my supply chain manager. Of course she'll be there. If there was any could do about this, I would—"

Elliot took a step toward me, his jaw like iron. "You are the Clawyers owner of the company. These people work for you, West. If you want to your evening with your girlfriend instead of your ex, you can and ked my I rubbed my forehead. It was a bad sign that my head was throbbing in the morning.

"Great. What can I do for you?"

"Brian Lewis is on the line. He sounds pissy."

No doubt he did. He must have heard we were in the process of negwith a new supplier. As soon as our contract ended with him, we'd be ties.

In the past, I would have taken his call because of our history an misguided sense of obligation. The truth was, in my position, there liot had need for me to deal with the minutiae of all the Brian Lewises Andes 1 so, all with. THE GLOWING SCREEN IN my Tesla jarred me. I swiped my thun the time. It had to be wrong.

If it was right, I'd been gone from Elise for nearly an hour. The impossible. There was no way I'd fucked up so monumentally.

My head was throbbing from listening to what had felt like he bullshit from Peters that amounted to a big problem I was going to handle.

This wasn't how I'd envisioned the night going.

"Elise." I reached across the center console, taking her cold hand in "I'm sorry, baby. I never meant to be gone that long. The deal with P unraveling because he doesn't think our strict oversight is necessary, up against a rock and a hard place with the end of our contract with Lewis—"

I cut myself off. Elise was staring placidly ahead, and if she was lift couldn't tell. Not that anything I was saying mattered.

"That shouldn't have happened tonight. The minute I recognized word going on, I should have told him I'd meet with him another time."

I brought her hand to my lips, kissing her knuckles one by one.

"I fucked up, baby. I was being the CEO of Andes instead of boyfriend and that was absolutely the wrong choice to make. It will happen again."

Worse, I'd walked away from Peters angry at his blustering and that attitude across the dance floor, straight to Luca and Elise. The sher tucked in his arms, her eyes closed, Luca smirking like the cat caught the canary, had nearly blinded me with rage.

I'd reacted before thinking, and now, I didn't just have to find a nb over make it up to Elise, Luca was due an apology too.

"SHE'S A SEVEN AT best." Simon puckered his lips.

"It's all smoke and mirrors. Without that red lipstick and all that hai be a solid four." Rebecca puckered her lips at Simon, both of them in Marisol the Beautiful, who'd been at Andes the past three days.

We were sitting outside in the plaza in front of the office. They w talking to make me feel better. It wasn't working, but I appreciated the "I don't care about her."

"Of course not." Rebecca's arm wrapped around my shoulders, and squeezed my knee.

It was the truth. My heart had been decimated by Weston all on h Marisol hadn't been a factor, nor was she. If he went back to her, I fe for her. To willingly be with a man incapable of choosing the woman he loved was a form of self-hatred.

I'd spent too many years hating myself to ever go back to that.

"Tell me more about Wyoming," Simon insisted.

"I'll tell you about it when I get back," I promised.

Last night, I'd been slipping into the kind of melancholy I experienced since I was a teenager. My limbs were heavy and acl when Saoirse tried to speak to me, her voice sounded like it was through water.

I WALKED INTO ANDES Thursday morning, and it felt like a ha had been wiped away.

The piece of information given to me by Elise had been the uncovering the nefarious, destructive conspiracy that had been going ounder my nose. Once that initial thread was pulled, it all came unravel surprisingly swift and complete deluge.

The past three years, the lead of my California field team ha accepting bribes from Brian Lewis to falsify his inspection repo actually hadn't set foot in that factory in more than two years. V oversight, Brian had been cutting corners to save money, illegally disposed of waste into the environment.

When my field team went to inspect Dominic Peters's factory dur negotiations, he'd been offered the same deal: cash in hand to look the way, allowing Dominic to ignore our strict policies.

No doubt he would have accepted, but our negotiations had gone av Andes had contracted a third factory. Dominic Peters proved to be the underhanded, duplicitous scumba first appraised him as. When he didn't get our business, he decided even by going to the press.

Through all this, Marisol had been beside me, most likely shaking boots while playing the supportive friend. The fact of the matter was been in charge of the field teams on the West Coast and all this beneath her radar was impossible to believe.

My team scoured her computer, uncovered proof of her negligen she'd been escorted from the building, her access to both Andes a zy film revoked. The last acknowledgment she would ever receive from me signature on her letter of termination.

A lot of people's lives were going to be turned upside down, some but I couldn't help being relieved. Now that we knew exactly what won right dealing with, we had a path to recovery.

And now that the haze was gone, a sudden and acute sense of d been washed over me.

Weston,

If you have time, I would like to talk. Meet me on the roof at six ton that doesn't work, please let me know when will.

-Elise

I had almost missed it. I'd been in the process of packing up for the c something had told me to check my inbox one last time.

There it was.

Elise was going to give me an opportunity to speak to he stonewalling me for over a week. Not that I didn't understand why done it. She had every right to lock herself away from me. That didn't hadn't been utterly bereft without her.

I made it to our building's rooftop fifteen minutes early. She arritime, and I rose from the chair I'd taken at the same table we'd sat arc her birthday. Her gaze landed somewhere around my shoulder. Mine everywhere, greedy for her.

She'd changed into a Chicago T-shirt, and I couldn't help but feel was a subtle threat. She'd moved across the country once before, she do it again. Chances were, she'd picked the first T-shirt available and overthinking things, but this was what I'd become.

A madman for her.

"I brought you a beer." I gestured to the sweating bottle on the ta you want it."

LUCA AND ELLIOT WERE already at the table when I arrived for Luca smacked a big kiss on my cheek, and Elliot hugged me tight usual.

I'd kept my distance from him, which hadn't been easy. If he had s at my darkest, he would have lost it. Elliot didn't care about many and I had always known for a fact I was his number one. He had heaven and earth to get me away from Patrick without asking a question. I was afraid of what he would have done had he known all the Weston had rejected and hurt me, so I'd chosen to only tell him we'd up due to his work commitments.

When Elliot pulled away and cupped my face, there was eviden around his searching eyes.

"How are you?" he asked.

"I'm okay."

A stretch of the truth, but if I told him I'd never been so brokenhear felt like sleeping for the next decade, he would have been...angry. No but at the source of my despair. The last thing I wanted was to drive a bigger wedge between my brother and Weston.

The empty fourth chair at the table was evidence enough of how dra things had changed.

"I ordered you a coffee, bella." Luca nodded to the steaming cup of me.

"Bless you." I picked it up in both hands, sipping the smooth but drink.

"I thought you were bringing your roommate," Luca added.

"YOU NEED A NEW jar. This one is getting full."

Elise came up behind me, where I'd been studying the odds and encartfully placed on the shelf in her home office. Her arms wound around middle, and her cheek pressed against my back.

"You write me a lot of notes. It was bound to get full."

I rubbed my hand on hers. "Is that a complaint?"

"Never. If you stop writing me notes, I'll complain."

Loosening her arms, I turned around to face her. "I don't fores happening."

"Better not."

She tipped her head back, giving me her mouth. I pressed mine is groaning at the feel of her lush lips. Over a year of kissing her, mo living together and seeing each other on a daily basis, and I hadn't used to having her.
