GRIFFIN

I always felt I wasn't wired like my peers, but when my brother, Kellan, told me three terms—ace, aromantic, and demi—I had possible names. Those three words have been on my mind ever since, as has my brother's friend, Josh Westbrook. It's been cool getting to know him and spending time together, just us. He makes me feel something I never thought I'd be able to feel. When we end up alone in a cabin with only one bed, all my wires finally connect and point toward being demi and wanting him.

JOSH

Griff and I were never supposed to be more than friends, but I like him more and more. I like being the reason he smiles, and...yeah, I enjoy making love with pleasure too. But Griff doesn't hook up casually, and I've loved him a long time ago. Still, we keep finding ourselves drawn together by shared loneliness and a deep want guiding us. Kellan's afraid I'll hurt Griff. Frankly, I am too. My past is still an open wound that keeps me from getting too close.

One thing is becoming clear, though—my Grumpy Griff is making his own rules. He says he's never known his place in the world, but I know mine with me. The only way for us to move forward is for me to step back...before I lose sight of him for good.

Griff

The TV was on, but I wasn't paying any attention to it. The past few had been... Hell, I wasn't even sure I had a word for what they had all happened in this whirlwind I still hadn't caught up with.

My best friend, Chase, and my brother, Kellan, were in love. They sneaking around behind my back. I discovered the truth along with the Havenwood—our hometown.

That was just the beginning of a lot of drama, but it was most of focused on. Taking care of Kellan had been my goal his whole damn I was being honest, I would admit I always took on that responsibility came to Chase as well, and now they wouldn't need me anymore. They each other, and while it had come as a surprise in some ways, it had others. I'd been pissed they'd lied, but I was happy for them. I just help feeling slightly hurt too.

Knock, knock, knock.

I frowned at the sound of someone at my door. I wasn't expecting anyone, and for a moment, I considered ignoring it, but then got annoyed myself for the thought. I was pouting, feeling sorry for myself because two people I loved the most in the world were happy? That was bullshit.

So I went over to open the door, only to see Josh, Kellan's best friend standing there. His wavy, chocolate-brown hair was a mess like it often. It looked like he'd run his fingers through it, mussing it and making it end.

"Hey, man. What's up?" I liked Josh a lot. He was a good guy. The one thing that bothered me about him sometimes was his cavalier attitude about sex, though I didn't know why I cared so much. It wasn't as if it bothered me when our other friends talked about hooking up.

Still, as much as I liked Josh, he and I never hung out just the two of us so it was a little odd he was there. Maybe if he'd stopped by the arrived before the rest of the crew got there, but he'd never come to the bar to see me.

"Not much. I just came over to kidnap you."

"Huh?" Kidnap me?

"I'd like to go on a hike, and I was thinking...who can I get to go on a hike with me? Oh, I know, I'll go drive Griffin Caine crazy because that's the job of a brother's best friend."

He'd never tried to drive me crazy before. Well, not on purpose. I'd never asked to go hiking with me before either. It was one of my favorite activities. I loved being outdoors, but again, it wasn't something Josh and I did together.

"Come on, man. Go hiking with me. It's not often I beg, but I'll do it if you ever tell anyone, of course."

Damned if I didn't chuckle. The truth was, I needed to get out of the house. I could use some fresh air, so I said, "Come in. Let me get changed."

Josh nodded and waited while I went to my room for a different pair of jeans and to put on better shoes. A few minutes later, we were climbing into his car and he was driving us away.

"This is a first." I wasn't sure why I was mentioning it.

"Eh, there's always a first for everyone." Then he waggled his eyes at me. I assumed at the sexual innuendo, and I rolled my eyes.

Well, that was...nice.

We started along the trail, and it was slightly awkward at first. We were quiet, and I tried to figure out what to say. But then Josh began talking to me, asking me about hiking, and what made me want to open a bar, and pointing out birds along the way. The longer we hiked, the more comfortable I got. The outdoors always had a way of doing that for me.

He'd said to talk to him if it didn't change. Later, when I was eighteen, he'd asked me if it'd better, and I'd lied because who the fuck wanted to be broken when Josh had to sex?

So I'd played it off. I went on dates, and had sex, and talked about it with my buddy Chase because that was what you were supposed to do at each. Sometimes I could almost fool myself. When I went off to college, I told him maybe it would get better, but it didn't. Still, I didn't have to pretend because I wasn't close enough to anyone for them to notice.

My brain kept going, repeating that thought over and over. That I could be gay and this would tell me, but I wasn't sitting here craving his dick because he was interested, but mentally, I didn't want to have sex with a stranger at all. That just wasn't me.

I've always wanted to know what it's like to have a pair of brothers, only it wasn't friendship in my fantasies." Kellan and Chase laughed, but the back of my neck prickled with awareness, like somehow, Josh touching me had made something weirdly horny firing off inside me.

"You're gross." I tried to pretend I wasn't standing there any longer. I just imagined signals in my body. It happened fairly often after the incident, which made sense once I realized what I'd done.

I'd like. "You love me, Griffy. I make your life more interesting." Josh leaned in and gave me a playful kiss on the cheek. It was as if his lips seared my skin, and I jerked back.

"I don't know where those lips have been." I wiped my cheek, thinking about the hotel, stop thinking about the hotel. That must be why I was reacting to him this way.

"Always busting my balls," Josh replied.

And then Callum and Knox disappeared to dance after that. I tried to ignore them and pay attention to my beer. If I tried hard enough, maybe I could fade into the background. The group was all chatting around us until eventually it evened out and Chase went to dance too. What would I do if someone asked me to dance?

It was like. "You gonna dance with me or what?" Josh questioned as if he could read my thoughts. My back shot straight, and for a moment I lost my words. "Friends can dance with each other, ya know."

I were. Yes, they could, but what about friends who searched Grindr to find who looked like said friend? "What? It's not that. I don't give a shit about that. It's just not my thing," I tried to play it off.

It wasn't long before a guy came up—a beautiful blond guy with blue lips and a confident smile. "You here with anyone?" he asked Josh, and Kellan had gut twisted.

Josh's eyes shot toward me. What the fuck? I didn't want him to find out, Griffy. He had to babysit me. I could handle a damn bar on my own. It was the only reason I could think that he wouldn't say yes. Josh always wanted to have fun.

"You should go have fun. That's what we're here for, right?" Sex was more fun to him than it was to me.

CHAPTER ONE

Josh

“Come on. You can do it. You got this. Only five more,” I encouraged my client who’d hired me for personal training. I continued to spot her as she finished up on the bench press.

When she was done, she grabbed a towel and wiped the sweat from her face. “That felt good.”

“It does, doesn’t it?” A lot of people didn’t understand the feeling of accomplishment from exercising. The burn my muscles always felt reminded me that I worked hard, and I reveled in that. It was why I’d always known this was what I would do. I sure as shit didn’t make a lot of money at the moment, the only reason I had a house and my own gym was because of the money my grandma left me when she passed away. As much as I loved it, though, I would trade it all to have her back. She’d always been my favorite person in the world. My parents and I had never been close. They might have been willing to give me a loan—they could afford it—but I wouldn’t have wanted to owe them. We just didn’t work that way.

We finished up her workout, which was my last of the day, since I was getting off at noon. I noticed the way she looked at me, the spark of attraction in her eyes. She hadn’t been in Havenwood long—she’d recently moved here from California—so she had no idea she was barking up the wrong tree.

Her gaze darted down to my hand. Looking for a ring, maybe. Just then, something caught my eye in my periphery. Not something, but someone very sexy male someone I took a quick second to appreciate. I couldn’t help it; I liked admiring beautiful men. It drove Griffin crazy. It was fun to tease him a little, so I often played it up around him, and yeah, I had no regrets about being thinking about Griff right then. Little shit liked to sneak up in my thoughts when I least expected it.

“Of course,” the woman said, drawing my attention back to her. “The really sexy ones are always gay.”

I chuckled and winked. “Yeah, sorry not sorry.”

She laughed. "I'll see you next week."

"Have a good one."

I went back to my office, gathered my things, made sure the car was shut down, locked the door, and headed for the front. "See you later," I told Jasmine, one of the employees who worked the front desk. "Text me if you need anything."

It was a Saturday. Kellan and Chase were having a little get-together at their place this afternoon. Kellan had been acting a little strange all week, but then he was Kell, so who knew what was going on in his head?

My house and Griff's were in town, rather than on the outskirts like the rest of the guys'. Mine sat back from the road, a little blue place I used to go to when I came to Havenwood to visit my grandma in the summers.

Outside of my childhood best friend, she was the first person I told about being gay because I knew she would accept me. She was the only person who knew about Doug, about who he'd been to me. I'd told her about our first kiss when I knew I loved him. She'd known our plans—plans that never came to fruition. And when everything went down with him, she was the only person I'd been able to talk to, and she'd come to Raleigh, knowing I needed her.

I shook those thoughts from my head. I'd been thinking about Doug lately, though I didn't know why. Most of the time, I did a good job of pretending none of it had ever happened.

I checked the mail and tossed it on the table when I got into the house. I went straight for the bathroom off my bedroom for a quick shower and a meditation session before getting changed, then headed to Kellan and Chase's house.

Their vehicles and Griff's truck were the only ones there so far. I parked my Mustang up and hopped out.

In the beginning, Griffin and I were never too close. There used to be a distinct separation between our friends. There was me, Kellan, and our friend Natalie, then Griffin's buddies Knox and Lawson. Then Chase came to town, and I'd hated him when he first showed up. He and Kellan were domesticated and in love, and our friends group merged. It was weird at first. Griff at first. He'd appointed himself Kellan's protector, even though he never needed it. When Griff understood that, it seemed to be a big revelation for him, like he didn't know what to do with himself.

I started hanging out with him more after that, and realized I liked my grumpy Caine brother more than I'd thought I would. He was fun to go to. Griff needed more fun in his life, and I was going to give it to him, he did come kicking and screaming most of the time.

He jerked away, his eyes wide. “Oh, I get to be on the list of guys I want to kiss today?”

who knew “Jealous?” I teased. Sex was one of my favorite things. I’d always been a highly sexual person, and I didn’t see that changing. And why should I come to was single, and they were always consenting adults. Nothing wrong with a person having fun and enjoying sex. “You didn’t even know that guy you were kissing at the bar in Rick’s house. Last weekend,” he countered. The group of us had finally made it into a weekend jack-for a night out, something we’d been trying to make happen for a long time. Somehow, I’d gotten Griffin to go. It was his first time in a gay bar. I pulled and I’d hoped it would loosen him up a little. I’d wanted to have fun with him—even if not the sexual kind—so much so that I would have told the truth if Griff hadn’t practically pushed me onto the dance floor with his friend turning me down about dancing himself.

back to “Again, jealous?” I countered. He was always busting my balls.

“What did I do? He started it.” I pointed to Griff.

minutes He opened his mouth to reply, but then Kellan started speaking. “I’ll be there in five minutes while I have an announcement to make.”

I frowned, wondering what he was talking about. It wasn’t often, but whenever we were together, that Kell kept something from me.

like this Chase cleared his throat. “Things have been crazy around here since I was a couple of years old, but the one thing I’ve always been sure about is Kellan.”

“I’ve been watching Cal and Knox, and...I realized I wanted that. Kellan knew he wanted a family, but, yeah, now we both do. Natalie has agreed to what I’d carry the baby.” Kellan nudged him. “It’s a long process, so nothing will happen overnight, but we wanted to tell all of you first. At some point, I’ll be pregnant and we’ll be dads.”

It was I felt Griff stiffen beside me, which meant he hadn’t known about either. Kell and Chase were allowed to have their secrets, of course. In Kellan’s sense they would make the decision together before telling anyone, but dogs ran to admit, there was a dull ache in my chest that I hadn’t known they were considering. If I was feeling it, I couldn’t imagine how much Griffin was.

to him. “We wanted to ask Nat before we told you guys, but as soon as everyone agreed, we planned this,” Kellan rushed out. “And, um, that’s not a lie.” He turned toward Chase and lowered down to one knee. Holy shit. What was happening? “Chase Hawthorne, you are the best thing that’s ever happened to me. I’ve loved you my whole life, and—”

“Yes.” Chase tugged Kellan to his feet, answering the question for each Kellan could ask it. Then they were kissing and crying, and when they pulled away, Kellan’s shaky hand pushed a ring onto Chase’s finger.

Everyone was clapping and congratulating them, but Kell’s eyes stayed on Chase. “I know for Griffin. They moved toward each other, almost as if in slow motion. “I’m sorry I didn’t tell you first. I just...”

come on. “Shut the hell up and give me a hug,” Griff told him, which Kellan did. “I’m around.” “I’m happy for you. You know that,” Griff added as I watched the ring slide between them. It was intense, the way they were looking at each other.

CHAPTER TWO

Griffin

I didn't know what it was about Kellan and Chase's announcements that made me so twisted up. My emotions were like that game with the paddle ball on the string. They didn't make sense and were all over the place, like a tether getting all tangled every time I thought I got a handle on them. What was the deal with that game, anyway? Was anyone actually good at it?

On the one hand, Jesus, I was happy for them. In a lot of ways, Kellan and Chase's best interests had always been the most important thing in the world to me. Sure, those two truths used to be two separate entities, but now they were entwined. Kellan and Chase both had everything I always wanted for them, so why was there a part of me that felt like a puppy who'd been left at home alone and had nothing better to do than sit around and wait for people to come back to them?

It was fucking ridiculous. And embarrassing.

Maybe I'd feel better tomorrow.

I'd left their place a little over an hour ago, grabbed a bottle of wine, and was now sitting on my back porch, drinking from the bottle. Even though I owned a bar, I wasn't much of a drinker, at least not hard alcohol. I could drink a good beer, but rarely enough for even a buzz.

"Boo!" came from behind me just as I was about to take a drink. It tumbled from my hand before I got my grip, and I looked over my shoulder to see Josh standing in the doorway leading from the kitchen to the yard.

"What the hell are you doing here? And why are you in my house?"

He sighed, came outside, and took the chair beside me. It was pitch black in front of us, the sound of frogs and crickets breaking through the night. Moths fluttered around the light on the porch.

"I would think the reason I'm here is pretty obvious. To see you, right? You can think of some other reason I should be here?" When I only grunted in return, he added, "And I was in your house because your truck is outside, but when I knocked, you didn't answer."

“So you let yourself in?”

“Damn straight, though not really straight at all.” He winked, and my eyes.

“That was cheesy.”

“Yeah, but I got you to smile, grump-ass.”

Damn it. Fucking Josh was right. I was smiling. I didn't meet him. The thing was, it had been hard to look at him ever since that night that had summer when I'd realized the man I'd met for sex looked like him. He and the the same wavy, chestnut-colored hair, both messy and sort of floppy ace, the same long, muscular frame, similar angular features, sharp, skinny nose. What high cheekbones. He hadn't had that damn Marilyn Monroe beauty mark Josh did, and maybe his lashes weren't quite as thick, but—Why in the hell was I thinking about his goddamned eyelashes? What in the hell was in the shit?

I tilted the bottle back and took another drink.

“Gimme that,” Josh said, and I handed him the bottle. He took a swig and passed it back. We sat there for a while, in the quiet fall evening, lulled by the sounds of Virginia nights.

I swallowed down some more.

“It's weird, huh? Kell and Chase?” he finally said.

“It shouldn't be.”

“That doesn't mean it isn't. I hate that—what people should though shouldn't feel. We're fucking human, and we're all different. There are rules on how something affects us or doesn't.” He was right. I was a tease him about being so damn profound, when he took the bottle from almost hand and added, “Well, unless we're the ones who decide what we should shoulder shouldn't feel. No one else has the right to decide for another person.” drank more, then said, “Whew. That's strong. Keep it away from me. It burned fire down my esophagus.”

Fine by me. I'd keep my whiskey to myself. What he said continued to tumble around in my brain clunkily, like when you threw tennis shoes in a dryer. “What do you mean by that? Unless we're the ones to decide?”

“Exactly what I said.” He shrugged. “Anyway, I get it. I love Kell and Chase. I want them to be happy. I was iffy on Chase at first, but they're perfect for me. Other, and I know there's nothing Chase wouldn't do for him. It just...

“Feels like everyone is moving on without you,” fell from my lips

I wanted to suck the words back in, wished I hadn't let him in that way. I rolled there was nothing I could do about it now.

In my periphery, I saw Josh turn to look at me. "Yeah, that."

"Wait. What? You feel that way?" Damn, my lips were feeling loose, my chest was burning.

is eyes. "Yeah, Grumpy Griff. What, I can't feel left out with my best friend right this because I fuck a lot?"

he'd had "Please tell me you're not going to start calling me Grumpy Griff." I risked a glance at him, and he gave me a goofy grin. "I like it, use, and look into some merch too." He pulled his cell out of his pocket. "Hey, mark like me your best scowl so I can get a photo real quick."

he fuck "Fuck off," I said, trying not to scowl, but I was pretty sure it didn't matter. He snapped a picture. "Has anyone ever told you you're annoying as shit?"

"Just you, Grumpy Griff. I save it all for you."

a long "Gee, thanks. I don't know how I'll ever thank you." I took another look at him. "Come on, GG. You like it. Don't pretend you don't."

vening, I cocked a brow at him. Hey, apparently, when I was buzzed, it made it a little easier to look at him without thinking about that night in the hallway. "How many names are you gonna have for me?"

"As many as I want."

Damned if I didn't chuckle before looking away.

ld and We were quiet again for a moment, just sitting there, and it didn't seem comfortable. I'd always liked Josh. I used to think he would be good about to Kellan, before Chase came back. It wasn't until after Chase and Kellan got together that we got this weird thing where he teased and frustrated me. It wasn't an angry kind of frustration, more a confusing one.

1." Josh "You really feel the same way?" I found myself asking. "Like ever since I think moving on around you?"

"Yeah. Yeah I do. I think that's normal."

ued to "It's strange. I've spent my whole life worried about Kellan and trying to protect him, and worrying about Chase too because of the shit with him when he was young. When I went off to college, I thought it was about . I want going to be about me. Then my parents died, and I came back, and it was for each Kellan doesn't need me. I know that, but it's like, what do I do now?"

even am I if I'm not focusing on Kellan?" I'd always worried about my brother, but maybe all along he should have worried about me. / ay, but Kellan always knew who he was and went for what he wanted. “Shit. I hadn’t said that. It’s like my mouth is moving and I can’t control it.”

CHAPTER THREE

Josh

“Do you think it’ll really work?” Doug asked softly. We were abandoned house in the woods, where we always went when we wanted to be alone. Well, when we wanted to be alone that way. Since we were best friends, we were together all the time. He stayed at my house or I stayed at his. We played the same sports, and our coaches always talked about the amount of chemistry we had. Little did they know it was because we were so close with each other. Because I knew what Doug’s mouth tasted like and mine. My first...everything.

Neither of us was out. I was pretty sure my parents would be okay with it. They might take a little time to get used to it, but they weren’t the type to put much thought into me anyway, so I didn’t see them caring that much. My dad was gay.

Doug’s, on the other hand, would be another story, especially his dad. He would disown Doug. There was no doubt in either of our minds about that. Our families were close, our parents best friends, and while mine would do whatever, on the condition it didn’t come back to look bad for me. Doug’s dad put all sorts of pressures on him all the time. He had to be the best at every sport, and get good grades, and go to Stanford like his brother had.

“Why wouldn’t it work? We’re best friends. No one is going to be surprised if I go to California like you.”

“Yeah, but you already got accepted to NC State.”

Little did he know, I didn’t want to go there at all. It wasn’t me. I was happy at a smaller college or a community college, as long as I could stay close to him. Hell, I didn’t even know what I wanted to do with my life other than be with him.

I shrugged. “So? I hate the idea of heading off to a new school where I don’t know anyone. My parents will probably be pissed, but I don’t care. Doug craved his family’s approval in ways I never did. I knew my grandpa loved me. She was so different from my dad. I didn't know how he turned out that way, having been raised by her. Where my parents cared about money and status, Grandma didn't.

When Doug didn't look convinced, I added, "Stop worrying, okay?"

"I can't help it. You don't worry enough, so I have to do it for the both of us!"

"I'm sorry. I'll...try to worry more?"

Doug laughed. "Shut up."

"It'll be okay. We just keep pretending. Then we go off to college together as best friends, and we'll be across the country from them. No one will know, and we can be together for real."

"Yeah," he replied. "We can be together for real."

with it. My eyes jerked open, the dream about Doug already fading. The thought put me out. I hadn't dreamed about him in a long-ass time. I tried to do as much as possible, to keep myself from thinking about Doug. It hurt to think about him and I sure as shit didn't want to relive that pain again. Ever. I planned everything in my power to keep that from happening. Love...fuck, love hurts and I wasn't a masochist, wasn't fond of things hurting.

Grumbling, I got out of bed and went straight for the shower. I got up a little early, but there was no reason to put off getting up and ready for work. It had been a few days since my crazy-ass, what-in-the-hell-had-I-offered-to-take-a-trip-with-Griff. I had no idea where that had come from, and even though I'd felt a stab of disappointment when he said no, I figured it was for the best. What did I expect to change or get better about on some weird journey with him to... I didn't even know where I'd go. That was the most fucked-up part of it all. Well, maybe not the most fucked-up part. I finished getting ready for work, filled up my to-go coffee mug, and headed for Get Pumped.

Sometimes I still couldn't believe it was mine. I'd never had huge responsibilities to run the world the way Doug had. Part of the pressure came from my family, there was no denying that, but some was his. He'd wanted to take care of me, never did. Occasionally I'd wonder how we'd fit so well, how we'd fit in his grandpa's sense, but we had when we'd been together. He'd grounded me in money Shit. I was thinking about him again. My mind was playing tricks and somehow, I knew it had something to do with Griffin Caine. He was infuriating and a breath of fresh air. Leave it to Griff to be confusing as both of I took care of my morning duties before opening the gym. Pa running the front desk today, and I had Stacy with me, one of the trainers.

The day went by quickly, without any major hiccups. Those were togethermy favorite kinds of days. After my shift ended, I got in a workout ill everheaded home to shower.

I had dinner and fucked around in the house for a little while but started to get antsy. I'd always been like that, had all this pent-up energy needed to escape. I tried to work on one of my model cars. It was sort of I'd picked up when I was a teenager. Doug and I used to do them together and I had a display case filled with them. But even that wasn't keeping his was attention. For just a moment, I thought about hopping on to Grindr or tried, as in touch with one of the guys I hooked up with, who lived in the neighborhood much, towns, but I didn't do either. Instead, I shoved my phone into my bag to do grabbed my keys, and found myself driving to Griff's.

I hadn't seen him since I offered to temporarily run away with him. I figured I'd go to the bar, grab a beer, and shoot the shit. From what Knox t was a earlier, he and Chase had plans. Natalie was at work. That was why work. myself I was going to hang out with Griffin and nothing else.

I-been- It was early evening on a weeknight, so when I got there, I didn't come surprised it wasn't very busy. Rock music played through the speakers. I id no, I as I made my way to Griff, he glanced up from the beer he was pouring. I y going looked like he'd gotten a haircut, his black hair now slightly shorter. I planned sides and longer on top. His behaved in ways mine didn't, lying down most. it should. I watched him as those deep brown eyes of his took me in. I g, and had this rugged look about him. Not like Knox, but he had this permanent of dark stubble along his jaw, and deep-set eyes that always looked dreams was worrying about the whole damn world.

om his I took a stool across from him. "What's up, Grumpy G?" I liked things I better than Grumpy Griff.

d made "There's something seriously wrong with you."

n some I chuckled, but he ignored me as he walked toward the other end bar where a group of men were sitting and handed the beer to one of them. When he made his way back to me, he asked, "Did you come here to talk about your balls?"

"Nope. Your balls have nothing to do with why I'm here."

Griff frowned, his forehead wrinkling cutely. There was no denying it, Griff was hot as fuck. If he wasn't my best friend's brother and straight, I would have definitely hoped to get into his pants.

"What?"

Oh shit. I'd been staring at him. "I said, old man, your balls are small." I was only a couple of years younger than him, but he acted old before I was. It was a good way to give him shit.

A few people looked our way. Griff froze, and I bit my cheek, trying not to laugh. God, messing with him was fun. Not in an asshole way, of course. Together, I'd thought it really bothered him, I would never do it, but I thought my thought Griffin Caine enjoyed me more than he wanted to admit. I was getting enjoyed him more than I ever thought I would.

"I hate you. I can't believe I used to think you were my favorite person, Kellan's friends."

"Wait. Are you saying we're not friends? You're mean to me, man, so I'm not sure how I put up with it. Sometimes I even cry at night when I'm going to go to sleep, thinking...how can I get Griff to like me?"

He rolled his eyes, automatically filling up a mug of my favorite beer and handing it over. "Sorry about your luck. I think it's a lost cause." "I'm a determined guy when I want something." My voice was low and flirtatious, and I had a slight lilt to my words, and holy fuck, why had I just given Griff a flirty voice?

"Why did you sound like that? Your voice did that smooth, honey voice thing you do when you're trying to have sex with someone."

"Wait. You know my trying-to-have-sex voice? And that was the flirty one, anyway. I just gave you my flirty voice."

He frowned. "That's not much better. Why did you give me that?"

I paused, shifted. "Shit. I don't know. It just happened."

"Well, don't do it again. It's strange."

"You really are a bossy motherfucker, and don't worry, I have nothing to do with it." Of course, I hadn't intended on it in the first place, but that was the point.

CHAPTER FOUR

Griffin

What in the hell had I been thinking?

I'd been obsessing about the fact that I'd agreed to go on a trip with Chase. The thing was, I couldn't figure out why I was freaking the fuck out. I had no reason to. Josh was a friend. I would have gone with Chase, Knox, or even Josh if they had asked, so why was going with Josh any different? It should have been. There was no reason for it. So I decided there wasn't, and chalked it up to me just feeling weird about a whole lot of things lately, particularly the way Chase seemed to be moving on without me. I was in the same place I'd been in before, I felt like forever. It had never bothered me before, not really.

It bothered me now. I felt like there was something I needed or something I was missing.

It was my day off, and I was having lunch with Kell. We were going to Mr. Tom's. It was our favorite diner to hit up when it was just us because we used to go there with our parents when we were kids. It was where we'd come numerous times after they passed. Where I'd taken Chase as a child for treats when he'd been sad.

It was where we'd sorted things out when we talked about how we felt about Chase, and also where he'd given me those three terms I'd never heard of—demisexual, asexual, and aromantic.

My brother was already inside, sitting in a booth toward the back. I walked over and slid into the seat across from him.

"Hey, you." Kellan smiled. "I ordered you a soda."

"Thanks." I didn't have to look at the menu to know what I wanted. When the waitress approached, we both ordered a burger and fries. When she left, I said, "So, marriage and a baby, huh?"

"Are you sure you're not mad at me for not telling you first?"

I mulled over my words before replying. Was I mad? No, I wasn't. I'd just left out, but that wasn't something I was willing to share with Kellan. What kind of brother would I be if I took this moment away from him? I ne

CHAPTER FIVE

Josh

“You ever been to Lake Lure?” I asked Griffin as I sat in the passenger seat of his truck. We’d figured that would be a better vehicle to take the Mustang. Well, he had, and I agreed. I thought it made him feel in control of something. Griffin needed that, I was pretty sure.

We’d been driving for close to an hour now and hadn’t talked much.

“No, I haven’t. We used to do some traveling with our parents when we were younger. They liked road trips. I’m not sure why we didn’t spend more time in North Carolina.”

I nodded. “It’s about thirty minutes from Asheville. It was hard to get something last-minute. I got really lucky there was a cancellation. Even though they want to get their last trip in since the end of the season is October first.”

“You didn’t have to put all that work into it. I told you I could have done it.” I couldn’t help it, I laughed, and he glanced at me before getting back on the road again. “What?”

“Nothing. That was just about the most Griffin thing you could do. You shouldn’t have had to put the work into it, but it’s okay if you did? That way it should go, right? Griff taking care of everyone else. I don’t know why I didn’t see this in you until recently.”

He shifted, his body tightening in a way that told me I was making him uncomfortable. “I have no idea what you’re talking about.”

“I think you do, Grumpy G. We’re gonna fix that, you and me. I’m not gonna let you turn you into the most selfish motherfucker there is. You deserve that.”

“To be selfish? Isn’t that like saying I deserve to be a dick?”

I rolled my eyes.

“You’re always doing that. Rolling your eyes at me.”

“First, you’re the one who’s always rolling his at me. Sometimes you don’t even like me all that—”

“I like you,” he cut me off. “And wait. At the bar you were tell how much I like you, and now you're saying I don't."

"Same difference."

He turned to me again. "No, it's really not. And what the fuck do even mean?"

I sighed. "You like me, but you don't want to like me. Or you like me but you don't totally agree with who I am or some of the things I do. I don't want to talk about that right now. My second point, which I wanted to make before I was so rudely interrupted—"

"To tell you I like you! That's not rude."

"You just did it again!"

Griffin rubbed a hand over his stubble and groaned. "You're going to be the death of me."

"Nope, the life of you. Back to my second point, being selfish sometimes is okay. Everyone should be selfish sometimes. It doesn't make you a normal human being. I'm going to turn you into a normal human being, Grumpy G. You don't always have to do everything for everyone. It's okay to just think about you."

His eyes darted to me and then back to the road again. "I don't even know what to say to you."

"You can start with a thank-you and follow it up with, Josh, I don't know what I'd do without you. You're the funniest, sexiest, sweetest man I've ever known."

"So you want me to lie to you?" Griff replied, and we both started laughing.

The cab of the truck turned quiet again after that as we both watched the scenery fly by, all the greens, oranges, reds. Fall had always been my favorite season, but then, all those years ago, everything had happened in the fall that made it hard too. It sure was pretty, though.

"Are you freaking out?" I asked, hoping to distract myself.

"What? Why would I be freaking out to go away with you? We're just two buddies taking a trip."

Okay, well, that wasn't what I meant, but it was an interesting revelation. "No, buddy, I'm just leaving your bar. You don't do that very often. And since when did you stop calling each other buddy?"

Griff's hands tightened on the steering wheel. "Since now, and

ion. “I wouldn’t want to miss out on any part of the experience.”

If he only knew what the real Josh Westbrook experience was. It would be fun to see Griffin lose control, to be the one making him lose control. I mean, I’d been a gay which was not what I should have been thinking at all. Not about Griffin, my brother who, as far as I knew, was straight. He used to hook up with guys occasionally, but from what I could tell, he hadn’t been with anyone in a long time, but I’d while. It was none of my business, but I couldn’t help wondering why. “I’ll wait.”

away if Shoving all thoughts of sex to the back of my brain—seriously, why would I not fuck was that? This was Griffin—I told him what we would be playing and he said, “You’re a dick.” And that’s what we did the whole close-to-six-hour drive up the mountains—played games and just...talked. Even though I’d known Griffin for years now, we didn’t really talk like this, not for hours at a time, only when we were alone.

His navigation continued to give us directions, and before I knew it, we were pulling up in front of our rental. It was a small, traditional-style cabin, sitting on a more private part of the lake, tucked between some trees and nature.

Griffin turned off the truck, and we both sat there for a moment. Griffin scanned the area around us, but mine kept finding their way back to him. That was what made me curious in this strange sort of way lately that I hadn’t expected with Griffin before. I wanted to know what he was thinking, how he felt. I hoped he was happy.

“So?” I found myself asking.

This unfamiliar burst of...pride? Excitement? I didn’t know what it was, but it swelled in my chest. “That’s what I like to hear, Griffy.”

“Is it Griffy or Grumpy G?” He cocked a brow.

“Depends on how I feel in the moment. I like to keep you on your toes.” He shook his head, but a smile curled his lips. “Whatever you want, Joshy.”

Shut up “Let’s do this.” We got out of the truck and grabbed our bags. I stepped down when I got to the door, looked at the code they’d given me to make sure if it locked on the door, which would have the keys inside, and typed it in. When I was done, I had the key out and got it open, I stood back for Griff to walk inside. He did, and I followed him, until he stopped right in front of me. “Sorry, I’m wrong?”

It would “It’s a studio. There’s only one bed.”

control, “That can’t be right.” I slipped around him, certain his eyes were looking for Kellan’s stricks on him, but they weren’t. It was, in fact, a studio cabin with a bed against the back wall. Beside it was the door to the deck, and beyond that was a hot tub. I could see the lake through the glass. There was a small kitchen to the right of the front door, a living-room space with a couch and a television, and another door I assumed was the bathroom. “Well, it’s a studio.”

What the “No shit. That’s what I said.”

Griff first. I shrugged. “I can tell them. They must have made a mistake, but I don’t think there’s a big chance they can fix it. Not with this late of notice.”

Griff for I set my bag down and took a seat at the small table for two in the kitchen. Everything was made with dark logs, the whole cabin rustic and homey.

And it, we I called the company I’d booked with, and, of course, there had been a mistake, and no, there weren’t any other cabins available. I tossed my keys on the tabletop. “There’s nothing they can do, but we did get a discount for a free weekend when they open up again in the spring.”

His eyes Griffin looked at me like I’d lost my mind. “That doesn’t help us now. I’m sure we’ll survive. It’s a king-size bed, at least. I know I’m irresistible to you—you’re straight and Kellan’s brother, so there will be no getting handsy with each other.”

“He got handsy with my best friend.”

My eyes shot to Griffin, my heart suddenly beating way too fast.

“Fuck. I didn’t mean—Not that we’d—That wasn’t why I—Oh hell, I’m shutting up now. I don’t want to get handsy with you.”

I couldn’t help laughing. I was looking forward to this week, much more than I should.

CHAPTER SIX

Griffin

I didn't know why I was freaking out at the thought of sharing a bed with Josh. There really was no reason to. How many times in my life had I shared a bed with Chase? I wasn't that guy who made a big deal out of shit like that, but then, I'd also never tried to randomly hook up with a Chase look-alike or, well, any other guy look-alike—the way I had with Josh.

That had me feeling a little twitchy. Then I was pissed at myself for letting it get to me, because making a big deal out of it made it feel like something, when really, all it should be was nothing.

Christ, this was fucked up.

We unpacked our things real quick and decided to drive into C Rock Village for a late lunch. It was a tiny town, the population somewhere around a hundred and twenty. I'd read about it online when Josh told me where we were going. It was a throwback Western village, where the buildings all looked as though they came from the 1920s and '30s.

"Want me to drive since you drove the whole way here?" Josh asked when we got outside.

"Sure." I tossed him the keys and went to the passenger side. I wanted to not come off as jittery and unsure as I felt. The fact that it was something I had to try not to do, confused and stressed me out even more.

We were quiet on the short drive—the village wasn't too far from the cabin.

Our studio cabin with one bed.

Our studio cabin with one bed that I was still obsessing over.

"It's pretty up here. I love the mountains." Josh's words broke through my thoughts.

"Yeah, it is nice."

"My buddy and I, when we were kids, we used to head toward the mountains any chance we got. We found this old cabin out there, and we'd just hang out. Our parents didn't know about it—no one did. It was just our

I looked at him, but Josh's gaze was firmly on the road ahead of wasn't sure why this conversation struck me as important, but there was something different in his voice. Something a little huskier, like it was with emotion. "Was no one supposed to know about it?" I found asking.

"It was just a thing. I don't even know why I brought it up."

I couldn't remember a time I'd ever thought that Josh was purposefully lying to me—hell, to anyone—until that moment. It was so unlike I didn't know what to make of it.

I studied his profile, wondering what a guy like Josh could have been like—I'd known him ever since he'd moved to Havenwood, a few years earlier and Kellan were the best of friends. I knew his grandma had lived in Havenwood and he'd come visit her in the summers as a child, but I never met him back then. When she passed away, she left Josh the house and some money. I knew he had family he wasn't close to, who never came to see him.

But I also knew he was confident and funny. That there wasn't anything in the world he wouldn't do for my brother and maybe anyone he cared about. Josh enjoyed sex and laughing and didn't seem to have a worry in the world, didn't seem to have anything to hide, but as I watched him looking at me and thought about how he'd just spoken, I wondered if I was wrong about that last part.

He looked at me and gave me a cocky grin. "You think I'm pretty, don't you?"

An unexpected laugh jumped out of my mouth. His words shouldn't have surprised me, not coming from Josh. Maybe it was just that I didn't expect it right then. "Shut up. You wish."

"You do. I can see it."

"Pretty conceited is what I think you are."

"It's cool, man. I'm used to it. There's something special about that. It's brought stronger men to their knees."

"Are you saying I'm weak?" I teased.

He frowned. "No. That came out wrong. Not sure there's a stronger person than you. Not sure at all." My pulse shot through the roof. It was often that Josh, or hell, anyone, said things like that to me. I opened my mouth, unsure what was going to come out. Josh beat me to the punch.

It was said playfully, but still, the word sweetheart sent shivers down my spine, made a tingle form there and then spread throughout my body and was...unexpected.

“Y’all ready, or you need some more time?” the waitress asked, so I looked at her. She set our drinks in front of us.

My eyes found Josh, but he didn’t seem to be losing his shit there. If that’s what I was doing.

“I’m ready if you are,” he said.

“I’ll have a bacon cheeseburger and fries.”

“I’ll take the crispy-chicken sandwich and fries,” Josh added.

She told us she’d be back and left us alone again.

Josh rambled on about things we could do while we were there—the same, swimming, fishing, heading up Chimney Rock. I listened and replied the way he should, but I kept finding myself focused on Josh’s voice and his lips. At Kellan’s excitement I felt deep in my gut about our time here.

And the studio cabin with one bed.

Fuck, I was back there again.

Our lunch came, and I finally managed to chill out some. We chatted. The food was good. Josh joked about enjoying himself and the time. what he wanted while we were away and then getting back on track when we got home.

He tried to pay for lunch, but I insisted we split it. Josh rolled his eyes but didn’t argue.

From there we walked around the small strip of Chimney Rock heading into all the little shops and looking around. They had a lot of arts and crafts, which made me think of Kellan.

“I saw a grocery store up the road,” Josh said. “Want to head there to get some supplies for the cabin?”

“Yeah, might as well cook there as much as we can.”

Josh automatically went to the driver’s seat of my truck, and we drove to the store. We stocked up on food, drinks, and beer before taking the truck back to our studio cabin with one bed. Christ, I needed to get over that

CHAPTER SEVEN

Josh

I woke up to an empty bed and felt a stab of disappointment I had no body feeling, and quite frankly, didn't know why in the fuck I was.

I climbed out of bed, took a quick leak, and washed my hands. Early, the sun just beginning to rise. I went to the back door and opened it. That's when I saw Griff, sitting on a blanket on the deck, his profile near the door. He had his legs crossed, his hands palms up on his thighs, and his eyes closed.

He looked...fuck, he looked really fucking good. I'd be lying if I didn't admit that. Griff was sexy and had a great body, with muscular arms and a tight six-pack. He had a light dusting of dark hair on his pecs, and a tattoo that looked like hanging paper cranes vertically on his right side.

The sun was behind him, glinting off the water, and damned if my eyes didn't catch for a moment. It wasn't just because, as I'd said, he was so gorgeous, but Griff looked...he looked peaceful, relaxed, and I suddenly really wanted a part of that with him.

It was clear he was meditating. I didn't want to interrupt him, so I went to close the door quietly, when he turned and looked at me.

"Sorry. I didn't mean to interrupt. I didn't see you at first."

"It's fine. This is just something new I started doing with Remy, and I realized it helps."

"Oh." I wasn't quite sure what my oh meant, and also maybe hoping he'd invite me to join him. "I don't want to interrupt," I said again.

"You're not. You can join me if you want. If it's not your thing, that's cool."

"I'd like that," I replied, heading out. That was when I noticed music playing from his phone. I sat across from him on the blanket. "What do you do?"

"Absolutely nothing. I do it because it helps clear my head. It helps with his anxiety. Just, well, for lack of a better term, be, and see

Just be, huh? Well, let’s see if I could do that. “Okay.”

Griff closed his eyes again, but I was watching him. Watched as he took deep breaths, as he relaxed and let himself go. A few minutes later, I closed my eyes too, tried to clear my mind of...him, to be honest. Griff was throwing me for a loop, and I wasn’t sure what to make of it. I felt a connection to him lately that took me by surprise. It happened gradually. When it came to Kell, I knew the day I met him that he would be important to me, that he would become my best friend, but it was like a slow dance. It was Griff, the feelings growing steadily, sneaking up on me.

My body began to relax, my thoughts clearing in a weirdly mysterious way. I didn’t know how long we sat there, until I noticed the music was off. When I opened my eyes, Griff was sitting across from me, only he wasn’t looking at me, his nose slightly wrinkled up in that way it got. He was looking off, like he hadn’t been watching, but somehow, I still felt his gaze on me, which yeah, didn’t make sense, but Griff was messing with me and he wouldn’t even see it.

“I didn’t expect you to get into that,” Griff said.

“Honestly? I didn’t either. We should keep it up, though. I mean, when we get home, if it’s your thing with Remy.”

“Not consistently. It’s not even something I do every day. Just when I need it.”

He scoffed. “You think so, huh?” He stood, his muscles tightening and moving as he did so, and fuck, I needed to get my thoughts out of my goddamn gutter when it came to Griffin Caine. I wanted to do bad things to him. I needed to nip that shit in the bud.

I stood up too, thankful my shorts weren’t tented.

“What’s on the agenda today?” he asked.

“First, I’m going to make you Josh’s World Famous Omelets. Then, I figured we could go to Chimney Rock Park.”

“I looked that up. Seems pretty incredible,” Griff said as we went to the car. “But you don’t have to make me breakfast.”

“I know, but don’t argue. I don’t make Josh’s World Famous Omelets often or for just anyone. I wouldn’t want to rob you of that experience. It might actually make your whole trip.” It was strange how much I wanted vacation to be special for Griff. There wasn't anything the guy would do for other people. He spent his life putting Kellan and everyone else first. I wanted him to feel put first for once.

I closed my eyes. "World famous, huh?" he asked while I washed my hands.

Griff was looking at me. "I mean, it's me, so..."

I felt this. He chuckled. "Obviously."

gradually. I began getting the supplies and food out. "Is there anything you want to eat?"

He said, "When it comes to food? No. And I can cook breakfast tomorrow."

There wasn't a chance in hell I thought Griff would take no for an answer. He wasn't going to take part in this without some kind of tit-for-tat. So I said, "Deal."

Now he was cutting veggies and cooking up some ground sausage. My omelets were anything special, when it came down to it, but it was more fun to prepare them for me.

Griff didn't ask if he could help, but I wouldn't let him. It wasn't long after they were done and we sat down at the small table with coffee and our plates. He waited, watching as he cut into it and took a bite.

Griff said, "It's incredible, isn't it?"

"Oh God, yes. It's so good, Josh. I don't think I've ever had something so good in my mouth."

Two things happened at once. My dick perked up because fuck sounded sexual and my cock was definitely interested. Second, Griff was trying to realize how it sounded as well. His eyes widened, and he sucked on his thumb the wrong way and began coughing.

"You have no idea how many times I've heard that before," I said, dirty, which only made him cough harder.

When he finally settled down, he said, "Fuck you. That's not what I meant."

Then I said, "Sadly, but I didn't say that, and fuck, this wasn't nipping it in the bud."

Why in the fuck did I suddenly want to bone Griffin Caine? "Are you dying now?"

"Ha. Ha."

Omelets We finished eating without sexual innuendo after that. When we were done, we rinsed the dishes, then took turns in the bathroom getting ready for bed. Before I knew it we were back in the truck, Griff behind the wheel.

didn't do time, making our way to Chimney Rock Park.

First, and "I've heard the view is amazing," I told him when we arrived. "There are two ways to get to the top—stairs or an elevator. The rock formation is more than five hundred million years old. And you can see Lake Lure and Fossil Nut Gorge from the top."

"How high up is it?" Griff asked.

"Three hundred and fifteen feet."

"So over twenty stories... You know we're not taking the elevator, right?"

I looked at Griff and grinned. "A man after my own heart." A tingle of excitement spread like wildfire under my skin. I hadn't felt anything like this in a long time, maybe ever. I didn't know why, but I was really excited and wasn't forward to doing this, and specifically doing it with Griff. I wanted to do something unique with him that neither of us had experienced before.

We paid to get into the park, then stopped at Gneiss Cave and ate before we started. From there we went straight for the Outcroppings Trail, which is what the stairs leading to the top were called. I wasn't sure if it was the best of day or year, but luckily the trail wasn't too busy. There were other people on it, but we had our space, no one too close ahead or behind as we began our ascent to the top.

"Who do you think is gonna be more out of breath when we get to the top, that or me?" I joked.

"You, of course."

"You wish. I'm basically an athletic specimen."

Griff laughed.

"Maybe more like a god."

He laughed harder.

"Hey, I don't appreciate your lack of faith in me."

He turned my way and cocked a brow as we continued climbing. "It's fine. It's okay for you to doubt me."

He had a point there. "So we're both badass motherfuckers who are here to feel perfectly fine when we make it to the top."

"I don't know about that, man." Griff's hand came down on my shoulder and squeezed. Some sort of shock went through me, and Griff pulled his hand back like he'd felt it too. "Static."

"Yeah," I replied. Only it hadn't felt like that, not really. To be honest,

CHAPTER EIGHT

Griffin

I woke up around dawn again. I'd been doing that lately, sometime when I was at the bar until late. Josh had changed positions. He was stomach, with his arm bent, elbow toward me, his head resting on his hand. His leg was curved the same way, his knee like an arrow at me, his feet tucked under him, brown hair messy and sticking up at the ends.

He looked so serene when he slept. It wasn't that Josh didn't look peaceful in other circumstances, but he always had this air of expectation about him, like he was waiting or looking for the next thing. Not just in his relationships, but in his work, or things like that, but maybe as if he couldn't slow down or something would catch up to him. Like he had someone following him around that he was trying to outrun.

"Ah, hell," I said softly to myself. Now I was a therapist?

His eyes fluttered open. I knew I hadn't spoken loud enough for him to wake up, and when a mischievous grin tugged at his lips, I knew I would like what he said next.

"You really do think I'm pretty, don't you? You looked your fill?"

"You wish." I rolled over and got out of bed.

"We doing the thing again?" Josh asked rather than acknowledging my question. He sat up, yawned, and stretched.

"I was going to, but you don't have to if you're tired. I know it's early."

"Do you want to be alone? If so, I can give you that, but if you don't mind the company, I'd like to join you."

The truth was, I did want the company. I liked the idea of Josh being with me. What I replied with was, "I'm good either way."

I went to the bathroom, took care of business, and washed my face. When I got out, Josh had already laid the blanket on the deck. I went outside just as he was coming in. Our bodies brushed against each other as we did, his skin warm and alive, but also with a slight chill from the morning weather. I shivered, the hairs on my arms standing up, but I think it had to do with the climate.

Josh said, "I'm gonna, um...piss real quick. Then I'll be ready." I "Fuck." I shook my head, but I was smiling too. It was such a relief to hear him say that. Still, I found myself holding out my hand for him. Josh looked at it for a moment as if confused, before grabbing on so I could help him get to his feet. We picked up the stuff and went inside.

I made pancakes and eggs. We ate out on the deck together, then I went to the bathroom. We both wore jeans and T-shirts.

We were starting off our day with a hike. It wasn't like at the park before, but instead, on a quieter trail Josh had read about. It weaved through miles and miles of forest, with nothing but the sounds of our breath and footsteps, and nature.

"Can I ask you something?" Josh said as we began our journey.

"Feels like déjà vu from last night." Shit. I didn't know why I'd let it with that up. The last thing I wanted to discuss was how I'd asked him if he had been in a serious relationship.

"That a yes?"

I shrugged. "Sure."

"Why?"

"Why, what?" Though really, I knew. Somehow, I knew.

"Why haven't you been serious about anyone? You're not the kind of guy who likes random hookups, but you never date. It's just... I don't know if I'm really. I can see you with someone. A wife or whatever. You're a family man."

Griff. Maybe not kids, but you like to take care of people. Why do you let me take care of you? I'd have someone you can take care of and who you let take care of you too.

Fuck. Because of course he had to go there. I didn't even know how to answer because I was still confused on the answer myself. It felt like something was wrong with me. Telling him I'd never fallen in love was one thing, but saying I didn't feel the sexual desire others did, that I didn't know it was me. I would, weren't words I could say out loud.  There were even more ways Josh felt lonely like me.

 “There’s a small waterfall not too far in. Race you to it,” Josh said, damn it if the bastard didn’t start running. It was impossible not to win. There wasn’t a bone in my body that could ignore a competitive challenge.

 I caught up with him quickly as we weaved our way around trees down the trail, before we hit a creek and a waterfall.

 We stopped, both breathing heavily.

ears. I We weren’t there long before we took the trail again and kept going. I didn’t stop until it was time for lunch, which we ate on a large boulder off the path.

 From there we headed back the way we’d come and toward my cabin. I wasn’t sure if we were going to swim or not. We didn’t talk about anything important. Josh was just Josh, and I spent the time either laughing or wanting to strangle him, so I guessed we were doing that. In a strange way, over time, Josh and I had become an us, which felt different from the us I had with any other friend.

t of my Fuckers. He was right. It was so going to work.

We went into the cabin. Josh grabbed his trunks and tossed them on the bed. He unbuttoned and unzipped his jeans, tugged them down. “I think there are going to be little fish that nibble our toes?” he teased.

id, then I glanced at him, and he grinned. “You’re such a dork.” My eyes followed their way down his body, taking in Josh’s muscular pecs, the barbells on his nipples, his flat, defined abs, and then landing on the bulge beneath his tight boxer briefs. Lust shot through me, potent and quick, desire burning in my belly. I turned around quickly, trying to get myself under control.

I wanted him. Christ, I really fucking wanted Josh. A man. My best friend.

One of my best friends too.

Part of me wanted to celebrate, to revel in the desire coursing through me. It wasn’t a biological reaction to being touched or kissed or sucked; it was a bone-deep longing in a way I’d never experienced.

e same. Josh seemed oblivious, rambling on about our limbs getting eaten a little, balls shriveling up in the cold water.

I found my board shorts, and by the time I turned back around, it was 11:30. I was dressed. “I gotta take a leak.” I pointed to the bathroom and went in for a few changes. My dick was half hard, which was exciting but also confusingly scary. Josh was not the right person for me to feel this way about. He was like a different guy every week, and that was the complete opposite of what I wanted.

ere us. I tried to shove those thoughts away as I got dressed.

ifferent When I got back to the main room of the cabin, Josh was waiting by the door. “Get your ass out here, Grumpy G.”

pulled He wrapped a hand around my wrist and tugged. Then, just like we were racing, only this time it was toward the dock. We ran down the stairs and jumped off the end, splashing into the cold water that felt like ice against the sideskin.

“Holy fuck, this is cold. Why did I listen to you? I’m never listening to you again. Motherfucker, I’m freezing.”

ie.” Josh’s hair was plastered against his head, his teeth chattering, but he was lunging for me. I dodged him, but just barely. “What? I’m trying to keep warm. Come here,” he teased, swimming after me as I swam away.

I was laughing, and he was too. I turned around and splashed him, my joy surging through my chest in a way I hadn't felt in forever. I had thought that the why playing in the lake with him was so damn fun, but it was, and I didn't want it to stop.

I splashed Josh again, and he did the same. We chased each other around and forth, ducking underwater, then trying to splatter each other with water. Next time he lunged for me, he caught me. His arms went around my neck, hanging off me. "I'm tired. Why'd you make me do this? Take me back to shore."

"Me? I made you? How about the other way around?"

I turned a little, and he was still hanging on. Our faces were close, mouths inches from each other. I didn't know how this happened, neither of us was pulling away. We were breathing heavily and shivering because of the cold. A drop of moisture trembled on the tip of one of his eyelashes before he blinked it away.

We were kicking, trying to keep ourselves above water, and then his hands were on my waist...and what the fuck was I doing?

Josh cocked his head slightly, as if he was as confused as me. "What was his voice was soft, questioning.

When I didn't move, didn't reply, Josh began to lean in. Every nerve and bell inside me went off. I couldn't do this, couldn't want this. Not with him. We were too damn different, especially when it came to sex. Even if I was probably wouldn't even be satisfied by someone like me. Or, what if it was a fluke and I didn't get into it the way I should? I'd always been able to perform when I needed to, but it hadn't felt like this, the deep-seated desire spreading through me at a rapid rate. Just thinking about it scared the fuck out of me.

We jerked away from each other at the same time.

"Shit," Josh said. "I'm sorry. Don't know what came over me."

"I...I gotta go." I needed to think, needed to clear my head, needed to figure out if this was what I wanted, and what it meant, and how it came with Josh when we were nothing alike.

"Wait. Go?" he asked as I began swimming back to shore.

"Yeah. I'm fine. Just gotta think. I'll be back. Just gotta think," I repeated. It was ridiculous, running from an almost kiss. I understood what he was saying, but I couldn't stop myself.

CHAPTER NINE

Josh

I stayed out by the dock until Griff's truck pulled out of the drive, kicking rocks as it went. "Motherfucker." I ran a hand through my hair. This had been...really fucking stupid was what it had been. What in the world had come over me? Sure, I'd been feeling some kind of something when I hooked up with Griff for a while now, but as far as I knew, he was straight, and Kell's brother, and he was different from me when it came to what I was looking for. I couldn't risk more than just sex with someone ever again; my brain wasn't wired that way anymore, and that wasn't Griff. All that Griff would have done was fuck things up, not only our friendship, but our relationship with our friends, and potentially drive a wedge between Kellan and me.

But God, I'd wanted it. Craved it. Craved him.

And for a moment there, I was fairly sure he'd wanted the same thing.

I paced the dock so long I was surprised the wood didn't begin to rot under my feet. I'd fucked up, and I wasn't sure what to do about it.

It was a kiss—an almost kiss—and while for me, I couldn't quite put the dots on why it was a big deal, I knew it would have been for Griff.

I went inside, showered, got dressed, but he still hadn't come home. I noticed his cell sitting on the counter, where he'd left it when he was swimming.

I didn't know what to do with myself, so I puttered around the cabin, each moment that went by my worry scurrying quicker through every part of my body, swimming in my blood and pumping through my heart.

My hands were shaking. I tried to sit still, tried meditating even, but when I closed my eyes, all I could see were flashes of Doug, then Griff instead of his. Griff banged up and broken. Griff in that bed.

"Fuck. Where the hell are you, Griffy?"

I kept telling myself there was no reason to worry. What happened to Griff wasn't the same thing that happened with Doug. That Griff was fine. One accident didn't mean there would be another, but no matter much logic fought to break through, my fear kept reinforcing the wall.

Dinner. I could get dinner going so it would be ready when he got home.

I fired up the grill, put some chicken on. When it was done, I placed it on a plate and covered it.

Time didn't stop ticking, and Griff didn't come back, and my phone couldn't buzz with a call because he'd left his motherfucking cell phone at home.

I got a fire going in the firepit, hoping that would distract me. I turned to night, the air around me chilled, but I didn't feel it. Just sat in the chairs, watching the red glow move. Caught between worry, anger, and confusion.

I'd wanted Griffin Caine.

I couldn't want him. It was the worst idea.

But I did.

And I'd almost kissed him. I'd pushed because that was who the fuck I was, and he'd run, and now... God, what if...?

Lights moved across the darkness as the sound of tires on gravel filled my ears.

My leg started shaking, bouncing like crazy. The fist of fear wrapped around my heart began to loosen because I knew that sound, knew the noise Griff's truck made and the sound of his gait as he made his way toward me.

That only made the confusion grow even more and a different kind of twist me up inside.

The second he got close to me, it was like someone took the lid off a bomb. There had been something containing me, and now it was gone, and I exploded.

"What the fuck, man? Don't do that. Don't take off like that. Jesus, I'm worried sick. I thought..." What I thought was stupid, ridiculous, but it didn't change how it felt.

Griff's brow creased in concern. "Hey, I'm fine. What did you mean by that? Happened? I said I needed some space and that I'd come back."

I thought I'd pushed too hard. I thought I'd gotten him hurt. Goddamn, I was freaking the fuck out.

"Hey," Griff said again. "What's going on with you? You're shaking like a leaf. I'm sorry I scared you." Griffin reached for my hands, but I pulled them out of his grasp. Ran one through my hair, which immediately fell back into place again.

My legs were jittery, like someone had injected nervous energy i back. and I couldn't stand still. I circled the fire, my chest feeling tighter and I was going to have to tell him, wasn't I? Did I have to?

CHAPTER TEN

Griffin

We went back inside the cabin right after the sun rose. Josh exhausted, and honestly, I was too, but I didn't know that I'd be able to. My thoughts were still too full of everything that happened last night over the few days we'd been here, or for the past few months, or even Kellan and Chase got together. That was when things had begun to change between Josh and me, and now it had transformed into...I didn't even know what.

All I knew was I didn't want to lose it.

And maybe I needed it.

"I made dinner last night. It's in the fridge." Josh tugged his shirt over his head. I had to force my attention away so I didn't appreciate the view. The knowledge of that hit me in the chest, the impact starting in one place and spreading out.

"I'm good. We can grab something to eat later. Let's get a couple hours of shut-eye first."

He nodded, pulled off his jeans, and climbed into bed in his boxer shorts.

I stripped down to my briefs, thought about putting on my shoes, but I didn't. I got into bed with Josh. We lay on our sides like we had the last time we slept together, facing each other. It was him who spoke first. "Thank you for last night. I didn't know I needed that."

"Anytime." I meant it. Being there for him felt different than when I was the same for Kellan or Chase or Remy.

Josh's hand moved toward me, cupped the side of my face. I closed my eyes when he leaned in, not knowing what to expect or what I wanted. I breathed when his lips pressed to my forehead. He leaned back afterward, and his hand slid down to my waist. "This okay?"

"Yeah," I replied.

He settled in beside me and went to sleep that way. In the grand scheme of things, I told myself it meant nothing. Josh was an affectionate person, always had been. He hugged, touched, and kissed Kellan all the time he'd never done those things with me. Not outside of a couple of kisses.

No matter how hard I tried, I couldn't keep my eyes closed. The opening and looking at him as I thought about what he'd shared with me didn't know why it came as a shock that Josh had been in love. because I would have thought if he had, it would have been with Kellan. maybe because he seemed to enjoy being single, the variety of it, so that I couldn't imagine him only being with one person. I figured Don't, hell, part of the reason why. Josh enjoyed sex, yeah, but he also made it clear since he wasn't going to open himself up to a relationship again. The thought change me heavy with sadness for him.

I couldn't imagine having loved someone so much. Even though I broke his heart, part of me was envious that he'd cared for someone so deeply.

Sleep didn't find me, and Josh was only out a few hours before he woke up. I'd just lain there the whole time, watching him and trying to make sense of my thoughts and desires when it came to Josh Westbrake and

"You didn't sleep?" he asked when his eyes fluttered open.
"Couldn't really."
"Shit. Sorry. You didn't have to stay here with me."
But I'd wanted to. It was one of the realizations I'd come to while I was out. I'd wanted to stay close to him and inhale his scent and feel the warmth of his hand on my hip. Maybe even wanted to know what he tasted like and the skin of his throat and how it would feel to nuzzle his neck.

Annnd, it was time to shove those thoughts out the window. A real one.
I rolled over and got out of bed.

It was late morning, and Josh insisted on making us breakfast. Outside, took turns showering as usual, then headed into Chimney Village to walk around the Lake Lure Arts Festival, an outdoor event with a booth after booth lined the streets, filled with crafts, homemade food trucks, and more.

It was a little awkward between us, the conversation slower than it had been, a little stilted, but we both maneuvered our way around it by taking it head-on.

ne, but We got to a booth that had these small, silver turtle figurines that c

CHAPTER ELEVEN

Josh

We'd been home about a week, all the while tiptoeing around each other. Everything was unfamiliar, navigating our relationship since our trip and what we'd admitted to each other—friendship, I meant. Our friendship. It was just a friendship relationship.

I hadn't been to the bar at all, which was unlike me. I usually stopped just to hang out for a little while or to meet Kell there or something, but I chalked it up to the fact that I'd had a busy week at the gym after being there for several days. Which was true, but not the full truth. It didn't take me long to figure that out, but I was pretty good at pretending I wasn't as smart as I was. Denial, denial, denial, even if it was only to myself. Just like if I hadn't been honest, I'd admit I let Griff believe something about Doug that wasn't true.

I'd just gotten off work and was waiting for Kell, Nat, and Callum to come by. The four of us were going to have a workout together. It was so ridiculous that I was nervous to see Kellan, as if he'd take one look at me and somehow know I'd kissed his brother, wanted to bone him, but turned me down for a hookup because I was all fucked up after losing the only person I'd ever loved. It was a sign that Griff and I had made the right decision. If we were awkward now, it would only get worse if we started screwing around. Sex had never made something weird for me before, but then, I'd never considered having sex with my best friend's brother. The irony of the situation didn't escape me, considering Kellan, Chase, and Griff had all gone through this when Kell and Chase fell for each other.

I was at the front desk, chatting with Jasmine, when Kell, Nat, and Callum all walked in together. I looked up, my eyes meeting Kell's but I automatically averted them. Yep. I was making this awkward. What the hell was wrong with me?

I stood and walked around the counter. "Hey, babe." I kissed Kellan's forehead.

“Hey, you.”

I hugged Natalie next, then said hi to Callum.

“You guys ready for me to show you up?” I teased, only to get the of eyes rolling at me.

Callum patted my shoulder. “Whatever you need to tell yourself.”

We headed over to the four open treadmills in the back. I got on the machine, followed by Kellan, Natalie, then Callum. I was just getting going to the warm-up speed when my best friend asked, “So...how was trip with my brother?” My hand somehow slipped from the accidentally coming down on the Emergency Stop button. The belt and I stumbled, which elicited a “What the fuck was that?” from Kellan.
“Nothing. Hand slipped.” Which wasn’t a lie; it had simply happened by

I mean, God, I’m supportive if you were serious—du would be awesome if you were serious—but other than that, no. n. Thathandle the thought. You and Griff would—” on my “Can we stop pretending there’s a me and Griff? How in the hell conversation even happen?” Guilt was rattling around inside me, g with each second.

“I had sex with Miguel!” Natalie blurted.

“What? Girl, he’s hot,” Callum replied.

“I know, right? It just sort of happened. I was at the bar while Griff and Josh were gone, and I stayed late, and...I mean, it’s been a while. Even though I’ve pushed here keeps getting with other men. It’s a little unfair to me,” she teased. “I told you that. I looked at her over Kellan’s head, and she gave me a supportive look when it happened. Yeah, Nat would definitely be hitting me up for info later, and I sure as hell didn’t know what I would say to her. In some ways, I wanted to talk to her, but I was afraid to be someone. It sure couldn’t be Kellan, but I didn’t want to betray Griff. I just wanted to make this situation any weirder than it already was.”

We finished our cardio, then did weight training. Afterward we said a sweaty goodbye before heading our separate ways. We’d be meeting Griff’s that night. It was the first time in a while that all of us would be together. I don’t just think that was another reminder of how everything around us was changing. Our get-togethers used to be multiple times a week. Now Kellan was the only one left. “Callum had Logan, and they were busy being dads. Eventually that was enough to Kellan and Chase too. Remy and Law stayed in more because that was their way, who they were. I was positive those two would be okay in a world where only the two of them existed. Not that they didn’t love the rest of us, they just loved each other that much.”

But not Griff and me. In this, it was the two of us on the outside, looking in at the most important people in our lives.

“The cold hand of melancholy wrapped around me. Maybe that’s why I couldn’t talk to Griff. Maybe that was why Griff was suddenly interested in me. Maybe it was because I was so lonely. The thought was uncomfortable. It made my neck bristle, an annoying twitch pulsing at the back of my neck.”

“Goddamn it. I wanted Griff to want me.”

“Get your shit together, Westbrook,” I told myself. Anytime a person started speaking to themselves out loud, there was a problem.

I can’t remember the exact details, but I got home, showered, dressed, and ate. I worked on my newest car, which, motherfucker—the black Dodge looked suspiciously like I had just bought it.

I lingered at the house longer than I needed to, making sure to get to the bar a little later than everyone else. I didn’t know why. It was a dumb thing to do, but hey, I figured it was excusable in this situation.

As I knew they would be, the whole crew was sitting at the bar riff and back corner. Knox, then Callum, Remy, Law, Chase, Kellan, and I everyone Griffin and Miguel were behind the bar. I was proud as hell of God. “Buthiring someone and taking a little more time to himself than he used to ing it.” I said, “You guys can start having fun now. I’m here.”

"No worries. You're looking out for the people you love. From hear, that's your MO."

I shrugged. No reason to deny it.

People began to trickle out of the bar. By closing time, the last customer was paying and Miguel had already begun end-of-day duties, not leaving much to do. "You can go ahead and get out of here," I told him. "I can clean up by myself."

"You sure? I don't mind staying."

Saying no.” He sighed, dropped his head back, and I took a minute to finish the long column of his throat, the way his Adam’s apple moved. Josh met mine again, fire and want colliding between us. “I can’t get you off my damn head.”

My reaction was purely instinct. I didn’t plan it, didn’t give myself time to think or come to the decision. I shoved out of my seat, the stool tipped over and hitting the floor with a clatter. I grabbed Josh’s shirt and pulled him to me, crushing our mouths together. I was greedy for him, felt like I was starving. My hand went to the back of Josh’s head, and I threaded my fingers through his hair. I pulled him closer, felt the hard press of his lips, the stubble on his face, which he didn’t keep as religiously as me, and wondered if he enjoyed the friction of my facial hair against his skin. It was for me, and me, but oh, so fucking good.

Josh pushed me back against the bar, the end of the counter digging into my body. I didn’t care, not when he was flush against me, hard and greedy hands on my hips and mouth devouring me.

This was what a kiss was supposed to feel like—an answer to a need I didn’t know you had. Like the best kind of pleasure, nothing but the sensation quenching your thirst and feeding your hunger. If it always felt like this, I’d never stop.

Josh’s mouth journeyed down my throat. “Christ, what are we doing?”
“I’ll fucking throttle you if you stop.”

Josh laughed into the crook of my neck, his breath puffing against my skin. My own soft laughter bubbled in my chest. God, this felt good, so good. “Mmm. Bossy Griff. Me likey. What are you going to do to stop?” Josh teased.

Instead of replying, I held his face and slammed our mouths together again. Josh didn’t hesitate, his tongue slipping inside and moving against mine. He felt so good, tasted so good.

He tightened his body against mine, making the counter dig into my back. I must have made a noise because he pulled back slightly. “Shit. I lost my head for a second. Wasn’t thinking.”

“Shit. No, no, no, echoed through my brain. I wasn’t ready to lose this. I want to stop this raw, intense pleasure burning through me. I wanted it to go into my skin, into my thoughts, so I could hold on to it and remember it forever.”

“You like that?” Josh asked, stroking himself. I should have known I would feel like a verbal lover. “Do you?”

“Fuck yes,” I admitted.

“That's what I like to hear. You got me hard as a fence post.”

Josh fondled his cock, and I watched. Fuck, he was long, longer than I was.

His glans red, his shaft curved slightly, veins running along the length of it. “This is a thick piece of meat, Griff.” Josh rubbed me, tightened his grip on my cock.

“I can take it, though.” He leaned in.

Josh's mouth stretched around my dick and... “Holy fuck. Jesus. I can't.” He took me to the back of his throat, didn't work up to it or around it, just deep throat me, humming around my dick, my balls against his chest.

I was going to die. Sex with Josh was... There were no words.

He sucked me, bobbing his head and swallowing around me. Those gray eyes of his looked up with pride in them because he knew what he was doing. “You're doing to me, knew I was losing my mind, and nothing had ever felt so good and why in the fuck hadn't we tried this a hundred years ago?”

His mouth was so hot, so wet, and he knew just how to suck me, how to touch my balls, playing with them and gently pulling them. My words were on, that spinning. I could hardly stay on my feet. My dick wanted to live in his nothing mouth, like maybe we could stay connected like this all the time.

“Josh, so I didn't realize I was holding back until he pulled off and said, “Lead me, I let you do it to me.”

And I did. I pulled my hips back and thrust into his mouth. Josh grabbed my ass, bit, but when I went to stop, he wrapped his hands around my thighs, holding me in. “It didn't let me, so I kept going. We found a rhythm together, me fucking you.” He smiled around my cock and taking it.

I threaded my fingers through his hair and pulled and savored, and my sexual world was blown open in that moment. It wasn't just physical, it was this need I felt deep in my gut, living in my bones.

Josh started to jack himself, and that just fueled me. He was stroking

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Josh

I was a liar.

I'd been up all night, my thoughts spinning circles around my About Doug, how I'd felt about him, what I'd lost. The fact that I deserve this, what Griff was giving me, but I still wouldn't say no.

That wasn't what made me a liar, though. No, that was what I'd Griff. He'd told me this was different for him, and I'd admitted it was too. Then I'd said it was the friend thing, but that wasn't the case. It was, I was afraid I could fall for Griff. Hell, maybe in some ways I had, maybe I'd been slowly falling for months, with each joke, each fishing trip and conversation, and I hadn't known it. So yeah, it different for me because I never had this. Since losing Doug, I'd been of getting hurt, of feeling something, of wanting more. And now that I did, I had no idea what to do about it.

All I did know was I didn't want to stop. I wanted this, wanted (damn bad, it was like this deep-seated ache only he could cure.

Fuck, he even had my thoughts all screwed up.

Spin, spin, spin. That's what my thoughts were doing all night, and was heading to Kell's. The night before Chase had mentioned he today, and I knew Kellan was off.

I'd stopped and grabbed us coffee and doughnuts, and a few minutes I was pulling into his driveway. I needed to do this now, today, but I jumped out of my skin. This was so fucked, and I hoped it wasn't a no but I couldn't walk away. Not now.

I killed the engine, grabbed the drink carrier and bag of sugar, and out. When I knocked I heard Bowie's deep bark in the background, and the door opened.

Kellan smiled, his chestnut hair messy and looking sleep-mussed. He was sure he'd been awake. He was wearing flannel pajama bottoms and a shirt. His eyes scanned me up and down, landing on the food, then n and his gaze turned serious. “No.” He shook his head, then turned and inside.

Damn it. I should have known he would figure it out. “Babe...”

“You’re fucking my brother! I told you I didn’t want you to fuck my brother, Josh, not unless you’re in love with him. I can’t risk losing you to Griff... You don’t get it. God, out of all the guys you can have, why Griff?”

“Don’t you think he wondered the same thing when Chase started fucking you?”

“That was different. I was in love with Chase. I always had been in love with Christ, I can’t believe this. Give me my damn coffee.”

A small smile teased my lips as I handed it over.

“Don’t do that. Don’t smile at me, Joshua Westbrook.” Kellan smirked and sipped the lidded cup from my hand.

“The full name, huh? You’re pulling out the big guns.”

He sighed, walked over to the couch, and sat down. I took a step toward him, but he stopped me with, “Bring the doughnuts.” I held back my smile as I carried the bag and my drink over, joining him. Kellan didn’t say anything right away. He took a drink, then another. “Everything is going to be fine now.”

“No, it won’t.”

“A grown-ass man,” I cut him off.

“I know that. Don’t you think I know that? I’ve spent my life telling you I can handle shit on my own. I’m not one to jump into someone else’s business or try and run their lives for them, but...it’s Griff. And he’s not like you, Josh. Maybe it makes me a dick to say that, but we both know it’s true.”

We did. He was right. But what he didn’t know was that I wasn’t wrong this way either. I’d turned this way to protect myself.

“Are you in a relationship with him?” I shook my head. “Serious?”

“We’re having fun.” It was the only answer I could give.

Kellan looked at me, his brows knitted together. “And Griff wants to fuck around with you with no strings?”

Yeah, it sounded crazy to me as well. I couldn’t make sense of it. Griff would choose me. Still, Kellan’s words stabbed into me over and over.

walked All that was missing was creepy horror-movie sounds in the background. You think I would do it without his consent? Do you really think I would do something I knew would hurt Griffin or make me lose you? If that's wrong, I think, then you don't know me as well as I thought."

you, but "That's not what I meant, and you know it. Most of the time, people don't set out to hurt others. It just happens. Intent is rarely part of the equation, just—"

"Looking out for your brother. I get it."

1. Jesus "If you told me it was serious, I wouldn't bat an eye. Fuck, I'd be there. We're already like brothers, and I want Griff happy. I don't think I don't think he ever has been."

matched "I want that too," I admitted. For the first time in years, I wondered if I was truly happy as well. "Being demi doesn't mean Griff is in love with everyone he has sex with or enjoys sex with."

toward A flash of surprise lit up Kellan's eyes. "He told you he's demi?"
another Shit. I wasn't sure if I should have said that or not. Griffin hadn't spoken. Kellan was the one who mentioned the term to him in the first place. I know that I'm not stupid, okay? Have a little faith in me, and have faith in Griff too. If we're doing this, it's because we both want it, and we both know what the score is. We know what we're doing." Though I didn't really know if we knew that or not. I hoped we did. I hoped this wasn't a mistake. I promise you I have Griff's best interests at heart. He'll come first. Always."

else's Kellan nodded.

not built After setting my drink on the coffee table, I scooted until my back was against the couch. Kellan followed, leaning against me. I wrapped my arms around him, and he leaned his head against my chest. "Everything's changing."

Yeah, yeah it was. Everything had been changing for a while—except for me and Griff. We understood each other in that way. "That's because we're getting old. We're like thirty now. That shit happens."

hat? He "Don't, Kell. Don't do that, okay? Me and Griff will do what we want, and that has to be separate from me and you." Because I knew what he wanted, why do I say—that maybe Griff and I would be serious, that maybe we'd end up with him and Chase, or Law and Remy, or Knox and Callum. But it was d id. “Do for me. I didn’t have that to give. I felt like I was stretched too thin—would do and Griff and Kellan, this tangle in my brain.

hat you “Okay, but I have to say one more thing because I’m me and I will be me if I didn’t. It’s kinda perfect when you think about it—like think I don’t come full circle. I fell in love with my brother’s best friend. It makes sense. I’m that he should fall in love with mine too. Only to keep the pattern, that you have to fall for your best friend’s brother, the way Chase did. Can you make that happen?”

giddy. I chuckled. This was the Kellan I knew and loved. “Is there like a l he is. I push for that? A god I summon or something?”

red if I “Hmm. Maybe I’ll take up witchcraft. I can conjure up a love potion. Fucking Kellan. “Shut up and eat a doughnut.”

ve with “I feel like someone is always telling me to shut up.” He pulled away. I handed him some sugary bread. I grabbed one for myself, and we ate a bite, quiet for a moment. Then Kellan broke the silence with, “I’ve had said thinking about this all wrong, ya know?”

e. “Just “Oh really?” I cocked a brow.

ome in “I think so... I know you, Josh, as well as I know myself. If you’re h know this with Griff, then I think he means more to you than you’re willing to admit. I don’t know why I didn’t see it before, but it’s true, isn’t it? take. “I scared. What are you scared of?”

t, babe. The hairs on my arms stood on end, my chest tight and achy. I wanted to tell him I was scared, that I did care. I wanted to tell him about Doug, but I didn’t. I knew Kellan would tell me I couldn’t hold on forever and that it was my fault, all sorts of things I couldn’t hear. So I rolled my eyes, pretended my arm off track, and replied, “Commitment? That’s pretty scary. Or maybe commitment is a better word.”

He rolled his eyes.

cept me “You don’t know what you’re talking about. I’m not afraid of anything.”

e we’re But I was.

I stuffed a bite in my mouth. We ate and finished our coffee. We continued the subject of Griff after that, except every once in a while when he’d do, and would tease me.

s going Things were almost normal between us, if slightly stilted, like things had been a shift. He knew I was screwing around with his brother, and he was different about Griffin’s heart. I hoped that wouldn’t always be between us now.

—Doug When I left his house, I got out to the main road before I pulled the side, picked up my phone, and dialed. She answered on the third ring. “Joshua, how are you? It’s been a while since we heard from you.”

—Annie “I’m doing good, Annie. Sorry. Things have been crazy. I should probably contact better.”

—Doug “I always enjoy hearing from you. I hope you always know that, I can’t apologize for time passing. You were always so good to me.”

—Annie “It’s been twelve years now. Not everyone would keep in contact at all. I closed my eyes, rubbed a hand over my chest, and hoped it settled into a rapid breathing. “I’ll always keep in touch.” We were quiet for a moment before I asked, “How is he?”

—Doug “No change. He’s still in a vegetative state. No changes in his brain activity. After all this time, I guess I don’t expect there to be, but... there’s no real odds of him getting better. I know I should let him go, but he’s my son...well, you know how Frank is, but Doug’s my boy. I can’t do it.”

—Annie My eyes started to water, but I swiped it away. Jesus, this was goddamned hard. I couldn’t close my eyes without seeing Doug in the machines, knowing he was there but not, alive but not living.

—Doug “Josh? Are you there?”

—Annie I cleared my throat. “Yeah, sorry. He’s your son. You love him, it’s understandable.”

—Doug “Doug cared about you so much, Josh. He loved you. You were his best friend.”

—Annie I was in love with him, and I can’t move on.

—Doug “I miss him,” I admitted.

—Annie “I do too.” I could hear the tears in her voice. “Anyway, he would want us to do this. What’s new with you? Do you have anyone special yet?”

—Doug I was out to everyone in my life except Doug’s parents. Not long after everything went down with Doug, my parents left the Raleigh area and they’d lost contact with his parents.

—Annie “No, ma’am,” I replied, when what I wanted to say was, I loved you and he loved me. We were together, and now I don’t know how to move on.

—Doug For the first time, I think I want to, and I can’t figure out how to move on. Tell me it’s okay to move on.

Griffin

I was making lunch when there was a knock. A quick glance around the living room told me there wasn't a stray T-shirt there waiting for me, so I headed to the door and looked through the peephole. A tremble slid down my spine like a caress when I saw it was Josh.

Fucking Josh Westbrook. What in the world was going on? Despite the fact I had gone down last night, I still couldn't believe this foreign place in which we'd found ourselves together. This place where I sure as hell liked to

I pulled the door open. He crossed his arms and leaned against the door. "Hey, Grumpy G. You miss me?"

"So bad that I wasn't sure I would survive. I was actually in there trying to work through how I would ever go a day, an hour, a minute without you."

"Don't worry, it's not just you. I tend to have that effect on people."

"Is there some kind of pill for that?" I teased, and he laughed. A wave of laughter started deep in my chest too as I motioned for him to come in. When I closed the door, I realized I was glad he'd come. That maybe what I had needed him to come. I was still adjusting, still finding my way through how I felt, and what we were, and what we'd said. I didn't like being uncertain about anything. Most people didn't, I figured, but I was used to having the answers, used to finding them when I didn't have them, but when Josh was concerned, I was in unfamiliar waters without a compass; I wasn't even knowing how to drive the boat.

The house was set up so you walked into the living room first. There were the dining room to the left by the door, then the dining room, and the kitchen was to the right of the living room. There was a couch to the right, two chairs, and a TV on the wall. Josh leaned on the back of the couch, crossing his arms again. I damned if my gaze didn't snag on how his long-sleeved shirt stretched across his chest and his biceps as he did so. I thought about his nipple peering out, wishing I had taken the time to enjoy them the night before.

“No regrets?” he asked after a moment. “It’s okay if you have the can work through it, or if you changed your mind, then we stop. This ball game.”

His words didn’t surprise me. Josh was the type to always look out for others. “I’m pretty sure this is a team sport and we’re on the same one.”

“Yeah, but I’m not a rookie,” Josh replied.

“That doesn’t mean you don’t get any say in how the game gets played and the didn’t want this to only be about me and what I wanted. I needed so I just want me too.

knowing myself, I'd sit around trying too hard to keep things on an even keel, even if Kellan did say everything was fine. I had a habit of worrying about things I didn't need to. "Huh?" My brother had told me more than once, and right then, I was so damn tired. I just wanted to be.

"Brain." Josh said I should be more selfish, and maybe he was right. I didn't know how good I'd be at it or how long it would last, but in that moment, I was trying to be selfish, needed to think about what I wanted. And that was something I'd both time with Josh.

So once I was dressed, I made my way back downstairs, where Josh was sitting on the couch, looking at his phone. He turned, glancing at me and offered me his shoulder with this half smile that strangely made my pulse stutter. "Do you want to spend the night with me?" he asked.

"Sure. That works." I pocketed my cell, and we were out the door. I locked up, then climbed into the passenger seat of Josh's Mustang. "You have any other cars?" I asked as he began driving.

"I do. You're currently sitting in what has always been my dream car. It's a little cliché, I know, but I can't help it."

"Nah, you like what you like. Nothing wrong with that."

Josh looked at me, his brows raised. "I like you." A laugh tumbled out of my mouth, and he flipped me off. "Hey, fucker. That was good. You're a real delivery and all."

His reply only made me laugh harder. "Does that shit usually work for you?"

"That shit always works for me, thank you very much. You're lucky to be like you, because you're always bustin' my balls. Another man might have just hurt your feelings."

"Aw, don't be like that. You know I like you too." I reached over and poked his side.

It took me a second to realize how effortlessly I was playfully messing with him, this automatic state I wasn't real familiar with. I felt comfortable with Josh. Enjoyed myself with Josh. I had this chemistry with him that just came out of nowhere, but one I'd likely been feeling for a long time. Only because it came out as frustration that he was sleeping with other people instead of me. What had he done to me?

"I don't believe you. I think you should say it again. In fact, I think you should probably say it at least every hour while we're out today, just to make sure."

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

Josh

I wasn't sure I'd ever seen so much raw joy on Griffin Caine's face. Surprising he got it from a county fair of all places, but he did, and I wish I got to be there to see it.

We went from ride to ride. Who the fuck knew he was such a ride but he really was.

After a few hours, I asked, "You hungry? You want some greasy food?"

"Is that really a question? Greasy fair food is the best."

He was like a big kid, something about this atmosphere enabling him to break free. I could have sat there all day and night and just watched him.

We headed over to where the food was and got po'boys. We weren't even close enough to find a table. The sun was already going down, evening coming a little quicker this time of year.

"Did you guys go to the fair a lot when you were kids?" I asked him. He nodded.

"Every single year. Sometimes we'd even travel to them. It was something we did as a family. When Chase started coming around, it became part of the tradition too." He chuckled. "Kellan used to follow me around with big, moony eyes. I always knew he had a little crush on me, but I didn't know the extent of it. I probably should have."

"Does it bother you?"

He took a moment to reply, finished chewing his bite and swallowed. He was pissed at first, but that was my protective instinct. Now it just... I know? Feels like it was always supposed to be that way. I think maybe being honest, part of me worried I'd lose my best friend or my best friend and my brother. I know it sounds silly, but..."

"No, it doesn't. Not at all. It sounds honest."

"Yeah, I guess so." Griffin was looking at me funny, his head cocked a little. I felt the stare deep in my chest, so I looked down at my food and a bite.

Another question sat on the end of my tongue. I debated whether to ask or not, but who was I kidding? I was too curious not to. “You never mess around with Chase? You guys are so close, and I know it’s about connection with him. The two of you have more of a connection than damn near anyone I’ve ever seen so...” It took me a second to realize I’d begun holding my breath. I waited for his answer.

“No. Obviously, we never messed around, since other than the hospital, you’re my first man, but I didn’t feel it—the want for him. I don’t know what I really feel. It’s just how I feel. It was always only about friendship with him. We’re more like brothers.”

Why me, begged to fall from my lips. Why aren’t things the same for me? I sure as shit didn’t plan to ask that question, though. I wondered what he knew, what he would say if I did ask him. What was it about me that made Griff want me? Choose me? I’d never questioned that kind of thing before, but everything with Griffin was unique. I decided to change the subject.

“Save room for funnel cake. We can’t go to the fair without it.”

Griff nodded.

“Tell me about the tattoo?” I’d been dying to know about it—the one with the hanging paper cranes and the designs behind them.

“Well, I’d wanted something for a while but didn’t know what. My mom she used to fold a lot of origami. She was really interested in Japanese culture. Paper cranes are the most popular form of origami. My mom always told me the story of a young girl named Sadako. She survived the bombing of Hiroshima when she was two. A few years later she ended up with leukemia as a result of the irradiation. She started folding paper cranes, planning to make a thousand of them. It was how she worked through the pain of her loss. There are a lot of legends about the paper cranes; one is that when you fold one, your dream is supposed to come true. It sounds silly, I know, but that story meant a lot to my mom, and it felt like a way to honor her.”

“It doesn’t sound silly at all. What would be your dream, Griff? Mine’s that, if I’m a doctor, that’s part of it too, isn’t it? Whatever it is, you deserve it.”

“Yeah, that’s part of it. Maybe I just thought the tattoo would help me discover what that dream even is. I don’t know.”

“Hmm. I think we should figure that out, sweetheart.”

He rolled his eyes, but his face flushed slightly. It was a beautiful sight.

“Okay, enough mushy stuff. We have things to do,” he teased, and I asked him to change the subject.

...with We finished eating, chatting some as we did. When we were through, he nodded toward the games, and he followed. I went straight for the table where everyone, where you had to hit the bottles and make them fall.

As I “You know this is rigged, right?”

“Yeah, but you’ve never played with me. It’s my specialty.”

That guy, “I have a feeling you don’t think there’s much you’re not good at without why,” said.

Chase. “Your feeling would be right.”

“Jesus, what am I going to do with you?” He wrapped an arm around me and I liked the feel of it, the weight and his hard muscles over my shoulder. He dropped it too quickly.

It made It only took me one try to win the game.

Before, “Which one would you like?” the attendant asked.

Subject. I pointed to a bear with a grumpy face. “That one.” He handed it to me and I instantly put the toy in Griff’s arms. “I won him for you. He looks like you, Grumpy G.”

He three Griff laughed before saying, “And fuck you again,” but still, he took the bear and tucked it under his arm. I liked the fact that he really kept it.

My mom, We rode a few more rides, including the Ferris wheel, which he kissed me on top of. We had funnel cake and then were back in the car. He told me, “You wanna have a sleepover at my place?” I wagged my eyebrow in an exaggerated way so he knew I was being playful and there was no obligation.

Ukemia “Yeah, I think I do.” Griff had his Grumpy Bear on his lap and was fiddling with the tag.

And her “No obligation, though,” I said, to make sure he got what I meant.

Then you “I know. I want to go.”

Now, but I wanted him there too.

We were quiet on the ride over. I pulled into the driveway and killed the engine in front of the little blue house I’d inherited from my grandmother. wish she’d met Griff. The thought hit me out of nowhere, so much so it made me feel slightly dizzy. As much as I loved my grandmother, I’d never wished something like that before.

We got out and went inside. I turned on the light and watched as he walked around the space. I realized this was the first time he was Goddamn, he was good. It was like he was teaching me over to something new, like it was my first time instead of the other way around. The Hell, it felt like Griff was wooing me and luring me in, deeper than I had planned to go, with the simple lash of his tongue.

I wanted more but didn't want to push or stop what we were doing. I always loved the hard press of a man's strong body against mine, but for me. I Griffin it became this unexplainable sensation, new and raw and relentless.

7 dance My cock was aching behind the fly of my jeans. I must have been making a sound because he pulled back and looked down at me. "Everything okay?" "It's fucking perfect. I'm just going to bust out of these jeans. Are you okay if we take them off?"

bs over to me?" Griff growled in response, nodding. "Fuck yes. Jesus, what are you doing to me?"

"I don't know, but you're doing the same damn thing to me." We pulled off our underwear, and I got to see his cock again. A pearl of precome glistened at the tip. I leaned over and licked it off before saying, "My turn," and I took him deep into my mouth. He groaned and I licked over the top of him.

d down I licked his balls, ran my tongue up his shaft.

; down Griff looked like he was vibrating out of his skin. "You don't know what you're doing." "Fuck, you don't even know."

ing me, I kissed his hip bones, one, then the other. Licked the tattoo. Sucked his nipple, then his left, while he writhed and cursed beneath me. "I want your nut, know if I want that thick piece of meat in my mouth again or if I want off with you another way.”

Before he Griff’s hands held the sides of my face, and he pulled my mouth to my left again. “I can’t get enough of this,” he said, and yeah, I couldn’t even love kissing Griffin Caine.

He, still His hands tangled in my hair as we ate at each other’s mouths. I rubbed against him, each rub of our cocks together giving me the best kind of pleasure. He kept shooting me to the moon. Griffin made deep, hungry sounds. He kept rubbing my nipples. It felt tight as if afraid I would disappear. He ran his hand up and down my back, and I was being grabbed my ass, pulled me closer. “Fuck yes,” he called out, and I felt like I was being fucked by a damned god.

I reached around. I reached over, still kissing him, and tried to find the lube. When I found it, I wrapped my hand around it, I tugged it out of the drawer. Griffin tried to kiss my mouth when I pulled away, but I just said, “Shh. It’s okay, sweetie. I don’t want to go anywhere.”

I drizzled lube over our cocks, which were pressed against each other. Griff was thicker and had more hair where I kept mine trimmed, but we both made both hard and leaking and throbbing.

“Fuck, that’s so hot,” he said.

“Watch us. Jesus, you don’t know what you do to me.” I held my hands above him, hands flat on the bed, and moved so our dicks were pressed against each other again. Griff did as I said, his eyes looking down and watching. Our cocks touched, and he gasped. A drip of precome fell from my tip and onto his, and we both groaned. “Wrap your hand around us both, and keep watching.”

“Don’t take your eyes off our cocks until we cover those sexy abs of yours with precome, okay?”

“Holy shit.” Griff nearly jolted off the bed.

“Okay, so you like dirty talk. Got it.” Griff wrapped his large, calloused hand around us, and I fucked into it, our dicks rubbing and jerking against each other on his grasp. I kept rutting against him. He was moving with me, and when I moved, his head dropped back, I said, “No, watch us, remember? I want you to see what you do to me. I want you to see us taking our pleasure from each other. Watch, Griff.”

“Yeah, yeah okay,” he said breathlessly. “I like that, when you let me tell you what to do like that.”

“That’s good. Always tell me what you like, okay?”

I started pumping my hips again. His abs were tight as we moved.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

Griffin

We did exactly what we said we were going to do. We lay there together while before we came again, this time with me on top of Josh, rutting fist, our hips rolling together, cock against cock. It felt like I had a life make up for, which I knew was ridiculous. It was just that I felt so good that I wanted to soak it all up while I had the chance.

After the second time, we hadn't parted, a tangle of limbs while we went out until my jaw ached to the point I couldn't keep going.

Kissing had become one of my favorite things. Any way he touched was incredible, but something about tasting someone that way, about the feel of tongues and swallowing little moans, got to me.

I stayed the night, and the next day we went for a jog in the morning and hung out around his place all day, finding ourselves in the same place more than once, bucking our hips together or Josh sucking me off. Getting a fucking mouth was to die for. But we also talked, and watched movies, ate, cooked, and it was...nice. I didn't realize how alone I'd truly felt lately until I was with him and felt the contrast in both the quiet moments and the loud where we were calling out each other's names.

I didn't go home until Monday night. My house felt...fuck, it felt more empty, which should have been my warning that things were getting too deep for me too quickly. It was amazing how easy it was to get myself when doing so meant I got to keep having moments like we'd had in the past couple of days—moments that some people took for granted and savored every day. Moments I'd never known.

Tuesday morning I found myself driving to Kell and Chase's. I knew my brother wasn't home, and I also knew we'd have to talk eventually. In that situation, I would have gotten ahold of him ASAP to make sure even was okay. Guilt still ate at my conscience, for fucking around with Kellan's best friend in the first place, for not being the one to tell him, for not trying to smooth things over once he knew, but damn, I'd just wanted to speak with Josh. Was it so damn wrong to think of myself first for once? No, I really was becoming a little selfish. Hopefully that wasn't a bad thing.

Chase was outside with Bowie when I pulled up. I'd called ahead to make sure he would be around. He raised his hand in a wave as I parked. It was a chilly morning, a hint of moisture in the air.

Bowie jumped all over me when I got out. "Hi, boy. How are you?" He scratched his head and behind his ears.

"Hey, man. What's up?" Chase said when I made my way over to him.

"Not much, brother. You?"

"Dealing with your brother, who is freaking out about something between the two of you that he won't tell me about." Chase cocked a brow.

Well, that surprised me. Yeah, no one other than Josh and Kellan would have questioned my sexuality or my feelings regarding sex, but I thought Kellan would have told him about me and Josh.

"Coffee?"

"Yikes. Now I'm nervous," Chase teased as we went inside. He poured each a mug, and we doctored it before heading to the back deck.

Down, the fog in the distance around the trees seeming to match the mood.

"I, um, I'm gonna need you to be my best friend first for this conversation and not Kellan's fiancé." It was a delicate balance, I got that, but Chase had been my best friend since I was a kid. I needed to be able to talk to him about this.

"Yeah, Griff. Of course. You're stressing me out a little, though."

"No." I shook my head. "It's nothing bad, it's just..." I was drawn blank on where to start, so instead I took a drink of the coffee before setting it down. "Things have, well, they've been pretty confusing for me most of my life."

"How so?"

"Women. Sex. I don't know. I spent most of my life doing something because it's what I thought I was supposed to be doing. I felt like there was something wrong with me, so I'd pretend to be like everyone else. When it came to sex, when the truth was, I didn't get what all the hype was about. I didn't feel the same way about it as I think most people do."

Kellan's never understood it."

rushing "Shit, man. I'm sorry. I'm feeling like an asshole for some of the nd time I've said over the years and the times I tried to drag you out with me."

Maybe I "No, don't. How could you know if I didn't tell you? I spent

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

Josh

It was a little fucked up how I'd gone days, weeks without textin' before, and suddenly I had to argue with myself to keep from doing it. Arguing with yourself was strange and a little crazy, but I'd been doin' hours. It wasn't like Griff and I had been the text-each-other-every-day of friends. Hell, Kellan and I didn't always talk to each other even anymore either. Yet here I was, stressing myself out, wondering if I was still okay with everything we'd done, to make sure he still wanted to do it. I had to reaffirm to myself that we were still friends and this wouldn't change between us. I hadn't realized how much Griffin Caine meant to me until I started worrying I'd somehow lose him.

Griff meant a lot.

Maybe too much.

I also didn't want to be clingy. It was weird-ass shit, having to figure myself out not to be. I didn't get clingy with guys—at least not before I met my friend's frustrating brother.

I did well, though. I worked all day and kept myself from turning into a crazy stalker. I shot a message to Natalie to see if she was free and wanted to come over for dinner at my place.

She showed up just after my shower. I tugged the door open, and she came in, pressing a kiss to my cheek. "Hey, you."

"Hey, gorgeous. I'm lazy and didn't feel like cooking, so I ordered pizza."

"That's fine with me."

"Want a beer?"

"No, just water is fine."

I grabbed her a glass, and we sat on the couch together. Griff used to call me, her, and Kellan the three musketeers because we hung out together so much. I couldn't remember the last time he'd said it, to be honest, but I didn't spend as much time together as we used to. Not because we mean as much to each other—friendship wasn't based on how often I'd hang out with someone—but because...well, because of the same things had changed between a lot of us—Chase and Kellan being gone, Remy and Law staying home sometimes, Knox having Callum and living with him.

“What’s new with you?” I asked Nat.

you got “Never mind.” I shook my head. “But you’ll be surprised to know I’m not exclusively fucking around with someone. It’s not serious or anything, serious, like spending time together. I really want to fuck him, and he’s not the kind of guy to be casual to the extent of not caring if I’m with someone else.” I had no idea why I told her that. It was as if something inside me wanted to share about Griff...was oddly proud or honored. I didn’t get it. The only good thing was fucked.

Frowning, Natalie pulled away from me. “Holy shit. I always wanted to be with Griff, but I thought...no way...they’re opposites in too many ways, and I can’t be going straight, but—”

It would have been nice if you had someone you really care about and...my mind is a little blown right now. It’s then, it’s also not. You’re different with him. You have been for a while now. There we went. I stood up. “Don’t start with the different stuff. I’m not the same with Griff as always.” It was a lie, and even I knew it.

said the “Um, yeah you are, Captain Liar Pants.” I cocked a brow at her, and she rolled her eyes. “That was added, “It was the first thing that came to mind, but it fits.”

d like I “No it doesn’t. I’m not Captain Liar Pants. We’re friends, and I’m not the asshole.” “I’m not the asshole.” “I’m also feeling like an asshole right now because it wasn’t my place to tell you all this. I didn’t expect you to tell me who it was. This is Griff’s story to tell.”

“Oh, he’s doing it by himself?”

t to be I shook my head. “No, but I’m always open about shit like that. He’s not the asshole.”

And this was new for him, and he’d never been with a guy before. I had a hundred other reasons. Fuck, how in the hell had she figured out who I was?

lf from “I won’t say anything. I won’t tell him I know.” Natalie set Grumpy down, stood, walked over to me, and held my waist as she looked up at me. “I’m not sure why you’re afraid to be happy, Joshua Westbrook, but I know you’re being you. I don’t know why you’re afraid to love someone, but I know that too. Give yourself a chance, okay? Whether it’s with Griff or someone else.”

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

Griffin

It sounded cheesy as all shit, but the next couple of weeks were.. didn't want to say like something out of a dream because I'd never d about something like this. But it was this fantasy life I couldn't w brain around. I was spending the bulk of my time with a good buddy, laughed with and ate dinner with and gave candy out to kids on Hal with. We did shit like work on his car, fix a busted pipe in his bat throw the football around his backyard, and rake leaves together. But had orgasms together, a whole lot of them.

I'd just be watching a game on TV or closing the bar, and sudden was there on his knees for me. He sucked me off like I was a fucking worshipping me was all he wanted in life. We jerked each other off or off against each other, come sticky between our bodies more times could count.

Sex was...fuck, sex was explosive with Josh in a way that blew m each and every time. I couldn't get enough of it. All I wanted was m hunger for him insatiable, this beast I didn't think would ever be satisf

It was strange, but I didn't care. I just wanted to hold on tight and let go.

Still, I knew we were living in a bubble, in that fantasy life where were perfect, when really, we hadn't told anyone else about us even we'd said we would. Where I could forget Josh didn't do relati because he was still in love with a man who'd died years ago. And could tell myself I didn't care because in this place, with him, I didn't have to be responsible or worry about everyone else. It was as unlocked something inside me, this space I hadn't known was there, a I could just be in a way I'd never allowed myself to do.

I liked Josh.

I should have expected this. Josh made me feel desire for him l there was something there, this bond we had, and I should have figured it out sooner. It would grow.

Josh's bed shifted as he rolled out of it. We slept together most nights and we meditated some mornings, or he'd make me go jogging with him.

I watched as he walked naked toward his bathroom. His ass was tight, it was tight and muscular. My dick twitched just watching him move.

He made it to the doorway, then gave me that stupid, cocky grin and looked over his shoulder. "You watching me walk away, sweetheart?"

I reamed. "You got a problem with it?"

rap my "Hell no. I'll put on a show for you anytime you want." He turned and did some silly dance, his flaccid cock flopping around. "Do you know how sexy I'm sexy?"

hroom, "Not when you do that." But I did. I always thought Josh was sexy. we also "Well, now my feelings are hurt," he replied, and we both closed our eyes before falling silent. We stared at each other for a few moments.

I felt like I was feeling he was thinking about tonight, same as I was. It was the first night when all our friends would be meeting up at the bar since we decided to do this, and definitely since we'd decided we would tell people but I actually did. "You wanna shower with me?" he finally asked.

"Yeah, yeah I do."

I got out of bed, and the two of us took a shower together. I kissed him against the wall, water sluicing down between us, bodies moving together, hips thrusting, my thumbs dancing over those nipple piercings that drove me out of my damn mind. Josh wrapped a fist around my ass, and we came together with our heads thrown back, growls playing on our lips.

"Fuck, that felt good," he said, and it did. I couldn't help wondering if it was enough for him, though. Josh was used to sex and lots of it, but I was always with me. He rubbed his thumb over my forehead. "You know how Grumpy G wrinkles. What are you thinking about so hard?"

always "Nothing." I shook my head. I felt like a fucking idiot, stressing about shit like that.

nd now "Tonight will be okay. It'll be good. I'll follow your lead." Josh was always doing that, always trying to put my needs, wants, and feelings before his.

because "What about doing what feels most comfortable to you?"

"Making sure things are right for you is what makes me feel good."

gured it things I can control, at least.”

Somehow, I knew that “things I can control” had to do with nights. Jealousy infected me like a fast-moving virus. Shit. I was jealous over m. man. I shouldn’t have been resentful at all, but I sure as shit shouldn’t ...well, someone who wasn’t breathing anymore. “Josh...”

I went straight for the door, phoning Remy as I did. “You busy?”

sh was when he answered.

s above “Hey, no. I always have time for you. What’s up?”

“You wanna go for a little hike before I have to work this afternoon

“Sure. I’m at Sunrise now.” Sunrise was the café Law owned. “I c d—the over and meet you at our spot.”

I smiled. “See you there.”

Doug. Remy was maybe the kindest soul I’d ever known. He was gentle with a dead his space and his thoughts, but would always be there for a friend. Since he had to overcome to Havenwood, he’d talked to me a lot about his anxiety and depression. He was quiet and easy to talk to.

When I arrived, he was already at the small, graveled section off the end of the road. There were other trails along bigger lots, but this one was a little way out of town, fit only about ten cars, and there was only one other trail besides mine and Remy’s.

He had on a flannel shirt, old jeans with holes in the knees, and worn overwork boots. You would never look at Remy and know he was a musician—well, these days he focused mostly on song-writing, but still “Thanks for coming,” I said as I approached.

“Anytime. You know that.”

We headed for the leaf-covered trail that went through the middle of a dense area of trees. We knew it by heart. It wasn’t anything long or difficult but being out in nature in the fresh air always helped.

“Everything okay?” Remy asked.

“Yeah.” And it was. Everything was great, for the most part. “I’d like to use my like it? Traveling the world?” I found myself asking.

“That’s a hard question to answer. In a lot of ways I did. I grew up in a very poor and a little isolated. It was amazing to see so much of the world when we went there, to experience other cultures, great art, new foods and music, and like. But it also triggered my anxiety a lot. I’d worry about being rejected or hell, even worry about things that were unlikely to happen, like getting stuck in a foreign country. My brain played a lot of tricks on me. How much traveling?”

“We went on vacations every summer as a kid—road trips and theme parks, that kind of thing, but not as an adult. When I went off to college it was the first and only time I didn’t live in the home I live in now.” I asked about my trip away with Josh and how rejuvenating it had been. “I’d like to check out some more places, though. Little trips, ya know? Not too big, but...” What did I have stopping me other than my bar? Yeah, “I mean?” meant the world to me, but my trip with Josh was the only real trip I’d had since I opened the place. Miguel was a great addition. I could take me off. I deserved more time off. “Yeah, I think I’d like to do a little travel

Just something different from my usual routine. It was strange, I liked to acknowledge the restlessness that had always lived right under my skin beneath the surface, where I could pretend it wasn't there, pretend it went away as long as I had my bar and Kellan was happy, I had everything I needed.

"You should do it. You deserve that, man. I can't remember if I told you about the side but my dad left when I was young. I'm the oldest of my siblings, and as a little said, we didn't have much. I spent most of my life thinking I needed to be responsible for everyone else, that I didn't need anything for me, maybe my music. That as long as I had that, I could keep taking care of everyone else and not take care of myself. It wasn't until I met Law that I did anything that was for me. He...fuck, he changed my life. He opened up my world and made me want more for myself."

"But you guys separated?"

"We did then, yeah. I wanted it, but I didn't have the courage to go for it. It wasn't until I moved here and found him again that I really got it. It was difficult, myself. Not because of him. Love can help lift you up, but you still got to do the work, ya know? But loving him made me want to do it, made me want to make changes and to...hell, to really live. What I was doing before, did you know? It wasn't living, it was surviving."

Remy's words knocked around in my chest. Had that been what I'd been doing? Just surviving? It didn't make sense. I didn't grow up like that. What was Remy had. I didn't have anxiety or depression. I'd had a two-parent family and I'd never wanted for anything. And I'd always had Chase too. But when I was gnawed, kept walking, I thought maybe those things didn't matter. What did matter was the feeling lost inside and...Christ, I never really let myself live, did I? I just kept surviving, kept trudging along, working and watching my friends' and brother's lives move on without me. I'd known some of that before, but the truth felt different as it played through my head today.

And then, that day, Josh's gray eyes ran through my thoughts. His smile, and that damn thought on his face that I liked to lick, and the way he made me laugh.

I thought I'd fought to shove those images to the back of my brain. Josh was nothing business in my mind right then, but he was there, and I couldn't deny it. Griff didn't love him. I couldn't, I didn't think, but something about him made me want to do more than survive.

"I, um...I'm seeing Josh," I admitted.

Remy looked my way and cocked an auburn brow. "Am I supposed to..."

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Josh

I knew I would be the last one to Griff's that night. Everyone else's v were already in the lot when I arrived.

They were all in deep conversation about something. The bar wa full, but not crazy full for a weekend night. Griff looked up as I m way toward them and gave me a small grin. My foot caught on somet didn't know what, maybe the air—and I stumbled slightly, maki chuckle.

“None of you look like you missed me entirely enough,” I teased.

“Who are you?” Kellan teased back as I leaned over and kis forehead.

“I love you too, babe,” I joked.

“We're talking about Remy's music,” Natalie said. “He's thinki doing a short set here at Griff's soon.”

“No shit?” I cocked a brow at him. That was big news for Remy was such a difference in him since he'd come to Havenwood. It wa incredible to see.

Remy nodded. “Yeah, working on the whole living thing, instead surviving.” His gaze darted toward Griff, who gave him a simp Interesting...

“Good for you, man. I'm proud of you. We'll be your cheering sc took the stool that had been held for me.

“Don't say that. It'll just scare me,” Remy replied, making ev laugh.

Law leaned over and kissed him. “You got this.”

My eyes scanned down the line—Knox, Callum, Remy, Law, Kellan. “You guys are all mushy as hell.”

“Beer?” Griff asked, ignoring the statement.

“Yeah, thanks, Griffy.”

He smiled and shook his head like he didn't know what to do with

I could feel Kellan's stare on me. "What are you looking at?" I rub hand over his hair, and he jerked back.

"What the fuck, Josh. I spent a lot of time on that."

"I spent a lot of time on that," I mocked him playfully.

"The two of you are like a couple of kids together." Griffin set my front of me.

"This is news to you?" Just like that, everything was normal between all of us. I'd been nervous, I realized—it was why I'd come but I didn't need to be. They were my family in ways my real one wasn't. We all laughed and chatted for a while after that. Callum talked about studying with Logan for the math-a-thon Logan had signed up for, and I added, "It's great. It's not something he would have had the courage to do before, even if he'd wanted to. Cal is a whiz with that shit. It really boosts Logan's confidence."

Callum rolled his eyes, but I could see he was really preening under my praise. "I didn't do anything other than help him learn some equations, growing and gaining more confidence because he knows he has lots of support from his father." Knox leaned over and rubbed his cheek against Callum's, and I swear to Christ, Cal trembled. A foreign ache landed in my chest, spread out, took hold of me.

Fuck...I wanted that. What all of them had. I wanted it, didn't I? To distract myself, I said, "Nat, Kell, Callum, get your asses to the table with me." The four of us played teams a lot—Kell and me, Natalie and Callum.

"Yes, sir!" Kellan mock-saluted me, but still, the three of them got up and followed me over. Luckily, there was an open table, which we grabbed. Kellan and Natalie's gazes kept darting back and forth to each other. I could tell they both wanted to talk to me about Griffin but weren't sure they should in front of Callum.

"Just do it before you drive me crazy." I knew if I didn't let them do it, the two of them wouldn't give me a moment of peace, even if it was just them eyeballing me to death. At least this way we could get it over with.

"I can't believe you're having sex with my brother," Kellan spoiled but softly enough not to alert the whole bar.

Natalie added, "Isn't it crazy that there was a time when Griff was saying that same thing to Chase? And now Kellan is saying it to Josh?"

bed my “That was different,” Kellan countered, but without heat. He wasn’t angry, just working through it the way Griff had done.

“Wait. Are you really surprised, though?” Callum asked. “I knew that would happen by my second trip to the bar.”

beer in “Really?” Kellan asked.

“I started to wonder, but it was more recently,” Natalie said.

I again “Do you guys need me for this conversation at all, or are you guys late—finished racking the balls.

n’t. “I think we’re good,” Kell replied, and I gave him the bird. “I hope I don’t aboutfall in love.”

d Knox The back of my neck began to tingle. “Babe...we’re not serious to do talk about this. We’re just friends with benefits.” The words tasted guilty upfelt like I had to shove them out of my mouth.

“Oh yeah? Like the way Chase and I were?”

ider the “Kell...”

But I’m imagining the two of you living happily ever after in my after. Also, I still can’t believe I’m in a place where I say those words about having sex with my brother. We used to talk about sex and now...yeah, again.”

he pool “Are we going to play billiards or talk about sex because, you guys are against lumberjack does this thing where—”

“Can you guys stop gossiping so I can concentrate enough to break up and asked, and I silently thanked her. Then she added, “Also, isn’t that animal on the shelf the one that was in your living room?” Now I want her, and kill her.

Just as I bent over the table to shoot, I felt someone lean over me first, “Hey, gorgeous.” Breath whispered across my ear, and I stiffened, erection-and-I-want-to-fuck kind of stiffen, but my whole body going to saying “I, um...hey...” I stood and moved away from Kade. My gaze immediately dashed in Griffin's direction. He was standing behind the bar, Grumpy G wrinkles on his forehead, wearing a frown as he looked our way. Call me crazy, but it felt like Grumpy Bear was giving me a nod. "Good?" I eye too. As soon as Griff noticed me looking at him, he turned and started to make a drink.

pe they "Not bad," Kade replied. "Just wanted to say hi. I'll sit back and enjoy the view while you guys play, though." He grinned and walked to the bar. We behind us, leaning against it and looking our way.

wrong, I knew Kellan, Natalie, and Callum were all watching me, but I didn't want to myself glance their way, just bent over and took my shot, which I missed.

My gut was twisting uncomfortably as Natalie took her turn, then I kept looking Griffin's way, but he kept busy, our line of sight not reaching him again. Look at me, sweetheart. Come on. I'm not going to do anything with my him. But this was also exactly what I'd been afraid of. Why did everything have to be so complicated?

s—you "You gonna go or make moon eyes at my brother all night?" I asked, never asked. "Not that I'm complaining. I would much rather you watch him play his way."

ys, my "I'm not making moon eyes," I grumbled. What did that saying mean?

k?" Nat We continued the game, but I struggled to keep my attention on it. I was stuffed looking at Griff, willing him to turn my way so I could show him how much I wanted to believe in me. Even if this was just a friends-with-benefits thing, I'd made a commitment to him not to fuck around with anyone else, and I would stick back on it. He trusted me, he was giving me something special, and I wouldn't throw that away. Any other time Kade was there, I would have second loved to go home with him, but there wasn't a single part of me that was committed to that night.

CHAPTER TWENTY

Griffin

I had no right to be jealous. Josh had told me from the beginning wasn't looking for anything serious. I knew that going in. I'd told him I didn't want it either, and I hadn't, but the fire that burned through me when that guy had approached Josh told another story.

Not because I didn't trust Josh. I knew he was a man of his word. He made a commitment to me, and he'd stick by it. He sure as hell would not leave with another man in front of me either, but I knew there was a possibility he wanted to leave with the guy. That he was holding himself back because we weren't the same when it came to relationships. That he was going home with people, having sex, and then walking away until the next time.

That he wanted to do with other men the things he did with me.

More than what he did with me.

That he probably missed it.

I ran a shaky hand through my hair as I paced my office. Fuck losing my shit. I couldn't believe I'd walked away like that. Miguel squeezed my shoulder like he knew, and I'd just...walked away.

It didn't come as a surprise when there was a knock on the door. I unlocked it as I usually did. When it pushed open, Josh stepped inside, and we were in together.

"I wasn't going to leave with him," he said softly.

"I know that. You said it would just be us, and you wouldn't go back with that. If I couldn't trust you, I wouldn't be doing this with you. It's just that I hate that you might have wanted to. Because I wouldn't, not with any other woman who came in. Outside of biology, I wouldn't want them to. I don't want people that way, but you do. You're holding yourself back and fuck, I hate that shit. It makes me feel like there's something wrong with me, and I wonder if what we're doing is enough because—"

"I didn't want him!" Josh said sharply. "Fuck, sweetheart, I..."

wanted anyone else since our trip. It's fucking with my head and scar shit out of me because I'm not who you deserve. I don't have it anymore. You're afraid the sex isn't enough with you, while I'm not. I can't be who you need in other ways, but damned if there isn't a part of me that wishes I could. That wants to throw out all my rules, and forget about what I owe Doug, and just be with you. Sex is easy for me, Grant. I know what I've always been able to give, and I've had a lot of it, but this is different."

There was raw pain and anguish in his voice. I wanted to fix it. I wanted Josh to know that Doug's death wasn't his fault. I wanted to show him I could move on, wanted him to know he deserved to be happy, but all my words were a tangled mess in my chest.

So I covered his mouth with mine instead. Josh grabbed my hair and groaned into the kiss as I flicked the lock on the door and gave him my tongue. He tasted like beer and Josh, and there was nothing I wanted more than to drown in it.

Our teeth clanked together, our tongues and mouths a collision of need and hunger. I felt alive when I was touching Josh, like I was a beacon for energy, snapping and crackling with a lifetime of pent-up desire and the truth of wanting nothing more than surviving.

My fingers trembled as I went for the button and zipper of his jeans. He growled and thrust against me as I worked him open and slid my hand inside his jeans. Josh was rigid, a massive bulge against my chest, a soothing balm to my soul.

Jesus, what was he doing to me?
On instinct, I dropped to my knees. I wanted to pleasure him, to taste what he tasted like, to experience everything in the world that I could give him.

"What are you doing?"
I looked up at him and grinned. "I would think that's pretty obvious."
"Hey." Josh hooked a finger beneath my chin. "You don't have to do it right now. When you have my cock in your mouth, I want it to be for me, you're dying for me to fuck that sexy face of yours, not because of some other guy. I swear I don't want him, sweetheart, and what we're doing is enough for me."

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

Josh

“Do you want some more coffee?” Griff poked his head around the door from my kitchen. He was bare except for a pair of boxer briefs. It didn't matter that it had been over a month since we'd started this thing because I couldn't get over the fact that Griffin Caine walked around my house or nearly naked.

Or that he spent every night in my bed.

I still wasn't sure what that was about. Not that I didn't enjoy the feel of it, because I got to hold him and kiss him and come all over him, and I definitely not complaining, but it surprised me that it had become automatic. Griff coming to my place every day, and that I didn't mind. I'd have to spend the night or I stayed with them, but not on a regular basis like the “Hello?” He waved a hand in the air.

“Sorry. I was spacing off. Yeah, I'll take one more cup.” I picked up the empty mug and held it out to him. Griff took it, and I went back to work on my model car. We'd woken up early this morning and done the morning routine thing before breakfast, and now were lounging around.

It had been about a week since the night at Griff's when everything had gone down. Griff had blown me two more times since then, but inside that was the least of the differences. Something had changed that night, like a switch had been flicked, whether I wanted to admit it or not. Whether I said it out loud or not. Denial or ignorance didn't change the truth, and now it was that Griffin and I were more than friends with benefits. Fuck, I would be more, but how much could I give?

He came back into the room with my coffee. “Here you go.”

“Thanks.” I nodded toward the table. “Wanna pull up a chair and work on this with me? I know it's not exciting, but—”

“Yeah, of course I do. I've never built a model car before.”

“Well, I've never let anyone work on them with me since Doug, so Griffin was getting a chair, but he paused at that. “Shit. You don't

Our eyes met, and I saw the sincerity in his. Griffin would never that, but he wanted to build it with me. He would tuck away his own for mine, though, because that was his way. “I know. I want to. "I know."

"My dad...he was great. The best man I've ever known. He took care of everyone and loved everyone. People always say I'm just like him. I grew up with him, look like him—"

"Damn, your dad was hot, then," I teased, and we both chuckled.

"I always wanted to be like him, ya know? Wanted to make him proud while I was here. He would have given someone the shirt off his back if they needed it."

"Well, if that's what you want, you already got it. There's no better person than you."

He looked bashful, confusion wrinkling his brow. "Yeah?"

"Did he not know? How could he not know?" "Yes."

"I want him to be proud—of me, of Kellan."

"There's not a doubt in my mind that he is."

"He did a lot of things. Went away to college, volunteered, helped people in need, and lived a good life in this way I never have, before he and my mom married and started a family. He used to...fuck, he used to tell me he wanted that for me. It was so important to him that I left for college. I never told Kellan this, Chase either. I called but he sat me down once. It was the beginning of my senior year at school, and he told me he was proud of me, that I was a good man and that I should take care of Kellan and Chase, but not to forget about myself. He said that the strongest people take care of others, but to be able to do that, they first have to take care of themselves. That's what made me apply and get into college. It was a great conversation. Then...I left, and they died."

"And you stopped taking care of yourself. Jesus, Griff."

"No, that's not true. I have my bar."

"Which you love, but that's not taking care of yourself."

He shrugged, looking away. "This is. What we're doing. Don't know if it's exactly, but it's taking care of me."

“It doesn’t,” I cut him off. “And if that’s what you want, you should do it. I think that’ll be a good change for you.”

“Yeah, I think I will. I need to talk to Kellan first, of course.”

I suddenly wanted to do everything I could with Griffin. Wanted to make sure he wasn’t standing still, that he was moving forward. I didn’t care if it was big things or small things. I just wanted Griffin to be happy. “Let’s go to Richmond.”

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

Griffin

I'd sent a text to Kellan when we were on the road. Heading to Richmond for the night. Be home tomorrow.

It surprised me how quickly the response came back. Who is this, and did you do with my brother?

Ha-ha.

I'm serious. Who is this?

I'll call you tomorrow.

He was right. I didn't do things like this. I spent my days off with everyone from Havenwood, or working around the house, or doing shit at the bar that I could likely do while I was actually on shift, but it gave me something to keep myself busy. I sure as shit didn't jump in the car to drive the night a few hours away, going to a drag show and a club.

"What are you smiling about over there? Thinking about how much I like my cock?" Josh teased. He was driving. Even though he'd beat me to the room—by cheating, if you asked me—we'd decided to take the Mustang instead of my truck.

"I mean, it's all right, but—"

"Hey. It's a great dick, thank you very much."

"The best I've ever had," I countered. Obviously, it was the only one I'd ever had.

"I don't think I want to go away with you anymore."

"Aw, does Josh need a compliment? God, it's so good. So fucking thick—holy shit. I'm chubbing up a little over here."

We both laughed.

"That's what my incredible cock does to you."

God, I had fun with him. There wasn't anyone I enjoyed myself with more than Josh, and it was rare for me to let my guard down with anyone the way I did with him.

I didn't know what to think about us. I knew about Doug, that Joe still in love with him and couldn't give himself to anyone else like that ever since that night in my office at Griff's, things had felt different between us. He'd said then he didn't want anyone else, and today he said to tell me he was mine.

Josh felt mine, down to the marrow of my bones.

We joked around, making more penis jokes, because that was just one of the things he did. After that we talked for a while, and before I knew it, we were pulling up to a hotel that looked a little steep for my blood. I was a straight guy, and Josh was too, so the choice surprised me. Hell, I didn't even know when he'd reserved the damn thing. It wasn't something I'd thought of. "When did you do this?" I asked when we parked.

"A gentleman never tells."

"Well, first, you aren't one of those, and second, I'm not sure that's your definition of a gentleman here."

Josh nudged my arm. "Asshole." He got out of the car, and I followed along behind him.

"Seriously, Josh."

"You see, they have these new inventions called cell phones that allow you to get this other new invention called the Internet. One quick search was safely tucked away in the bathroom this morning and voilà! Our car is now in his hotel room."

"Did I mention you're an asshole?" I teased. He wasn't, though. It was great.

"You love me and you know it," he countered. It was said in a playful tone, and it sounded like a joke Josh would make. His reply had defused the tension between us, and yet we both froze for a second, just standing there looking at each other. I felt an unfamiliar needy pull inside me, this unstoppable force luring me closer and closer to him. Not physically, but inside, as if something was pulling me and I could sink into him, meld together.

Holy fuck. I was falling in love with Josh Westbrook. Or had I already? It was hard to tell. How did one know? I'd never felt this before, so comfortable, so right with someone. I'd never been in love before, but I thought I would, but God, I ached for him. Like all these loose ends suddenly all tied up when I hadn't known they'd been frayed.

"Griff. Breathe. It was a joke. I know you're not in love with me."

But that wasn't what I was thinking at all. I was thinking that I m about. I smiled. “Who makes me happy.”

Josh cocked his head slightly, confusion in his stare, as if he expected that. He answered not with words, but with his mouth on mine. That kiss felt like, You make me happy too.

It really was a nice hotel, boutique style, with this 1920s vibe. Joe reserved a suite, and after checking in, we grabbed lunch down the street. Apparently, we were close to the bar we’d be going to tonight—which was the same one we’d gone to the only other night I’d come to Richmond. He told me this area was called The Fan, and that it wasn’t too far from Virginia Commonwealth University.

After lunch we went back to our suite and ended up taking a nap. I was out in no time flat. I had a feeling he woke up earlier than he usually does on his days off because I got up early. It felt like something Josh would do. I lay on my back, with his head on my chest and his hair in my face. He was rubbing my hand up and down his arm, and it was so simple, yet so intimate, that it nearly stole my breath. I had never had moments like this, the kind of moments experienced with someone you could talk to but be silent with as well.

I wanted to collect them all and lock them away so I’d always have them. After his nap, we sat out on the balcony a while and watched the cars walk by. There were little shops and cafés all around us.

Evening came, and we got ready. Josh seemed quieter, more serious than usual, but even though I wondered, I didn’t ask him why. Some people knew he needed to sit with it, to work through whatever it was that he was so contemplative. Or maybe I was afraid of what he would say.

what I We went to a steakhouse for dinner, then back to the room until time to go out.

So stop Josh wore a long-sleeved, button-up black shirt that was tight across chest, his nipple piercings gently poking against the fabric.

upt my “The drag show is at the same bar we’re going to. The shows are usually Figured that makes everything easier.”

“Yeah, that sounds good. Whatever works.”

It didn’t take long to get to Barbelle, and I grinned at the name. There was a line, which we waited in. This would only be my second time in a gay bar, and I’d be lying if I didn’t admit I was slightly nervous. This was different from the last time, because it was just us and we were together—ne. Maybe wasn’t the right word, but we were something.

“What’s going on in that head of yours?”

“Nothing.” Though that wasn’t really true. “Just thinking about the next of events in my life.”

“Second thoughts?”

Josh had “Not one.” I cupped his right cheek, leaned in, and kissed him.

block. “Oh my God. You guys are so sweet!” a guy said behind us. “We weren’t hot, but sweet too. You’re looking at each other with the eyes.”

id. Josh “The eyes?” I asked.

Virginia “Yeah, you know, when you’re falling for someone but haven’t admitted it to yourself, much less each other. Believe me, I know. I’ve had the eyes a few too many times, only it’s usually just me, so you’re really lucky. It’s pretty shitty to have the eyes all by yourself.”

did do. Josh chuckled but didn’t discount what the guy said. “I suppose I’ll do my face. Maybe the right guy is in here tonight.”

perfect “A boy can dream.” He fluttered his eyes dramatically. “Or at least I’ll find you head in a bathroom stall.”

well. I We all laughed.

n. Then it was our turn in line, so we paid the cover to get in. The place was packed with gyrating bodies, locked lips, and touching hands. I was startled briefly out of surprise when Josh threaded his fingers through mine. He nudged me toward the back and the stairs to the second floor, where it was a bit quieter. Two drag performers were onstage, and one jumped in the air and landed in a split. “Holy fuck.”

“They’re amazing, aren’t they?” Josh said.

l it was “Yeah, I had no idea.”

They finished their singing and dancing number, while Josh and I, across his enough, found a small table to sit at.

Then the next performers launched into their routine. I had no idea upstairs. Much of drag was teasing and interacting with the audience. We ordered drinks, and by the end of the show, my stomach muscles hurt from laughing so much.

There was We watched for an hour or so before Josh leaned close, mouth next to my ear, and said, “I wanna dance with you, Griffy. I wanted to last time and I was different in Richmond as well. I didn’t want to dance with that guy. I wanted to dance with you – which says I was with you.”

I felt a tremble race up my arms and back. “I wanted that too. I don’t want to make the same mistake again. Tonight you’re mine.” If I could have the turnway, every night he’d be mine.

I stood and held my hand out for him. This time it was me entwining my fingers with his, me leading Josh to the stairs to go back down. I wasn’t a fan of going out to bars like this was never my thing, but tonight it felt like I was taking my claim. I was taking something I’d denied myself before, and stepping out of my shell in that way that being with Josh enabled me to do. I wanted to experience everything with him.

It really When we got downstairs, I found a spot on the dance floor and pulled Josh close. We wrapped our arms around each other, his hand splayed across my lower back, mine journeying up and down his body, wanting to touch him everywhere.

So it is. We moved together tightly to the music. Men were dancing all around us, and I thrived on that, while it also felt like it was just us. Me and Josh.

Just east for At one point, a guy came up and began dancing behind me. I surrendered to the unfamiliar surge of possessiveness flooding through me. “I don’t share,” I told the guy, who held up his hands in defeat.

My face was “My bad, man. Was just having some fun.”

My face turned up “Mmm, you got all growly when you said that,” Josh told me.

He led “Making up for lost time. Saying what I should have said last time.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

Josh

I'd been filled with conflicting emotions all day—well, at least since I stood at the trunk of my car when I made the offhand joke about Griff wanting me. I wanted him to. The truth had been obvious the second I'd said I wanted Griff to love me. I wanted to be his and claim him as mine because he made me feel alive in ways I hadn't known I needed.

It was strange to acknowledge that I thought I'd been living my best life when I had my own home, and my own business, and the best of friends. I had everything I wanted, and laughed every day, and didn't lack for anything. Everything was different. Being with Griff, him trusting me the way he was, giving me these pieces of himself he didn't give to anyone else, made me realize how much I'd truly been missing. I didn't mean the sex either, I meant everything. His smile and his conversation and his care. His feelings and his laugh and his hopes. That was my best life. Griff was.

And I wasn't being truthful with him.

It had plagued me all night, while we ate dinner, and while we watched the show, and during the show when he laughed, deep and rich, the sound vibrating in my chest.

When he held me and danced with me and said he didn't share, and I wanted to feel me feel possessed, like I belonged, and damned if I didn't want to be Griffin Caine.

We stayed at the bar until about midnight.

We were sweaty and laughing, our hands sticking together as we left the bar and walked down the block to our hotel.

When we got to our suite, I motioned toward the bathroom. “Take a shower with me, sweetheart.”

Griff followed me into the room. I turned on the water, and we started stripping out of our clothes.

“Jesus, this is hot.” I let my fingers dance down the tattoo on his side.

“Not as hot as these.” Griffin brushed his thumbs over the barbell.

nipples, and I hissed.

“Fuck, that feels good. You keep that up, and I’m gonna end up on my knees for you. You know how much I like worshipping this cock.” I kissed him.

“Not at all, just not in here. I want you in the bed.”

Griff nodded. We washed the sweat off our bodies, but still kept ourselves up with our hands and lips on each other—kisses on a shoulder, brushing down an ass, a fist wrapped around a cock or cupping balls.

It was like I blinked and the shower was off. Blinked again and we were drying ourselves, blinked again and we were on the bed with me on my back and Griffin on top of me. His body was cradled between my spread legs, his hand on my face as he looked down at me. “I want you. I want you...but I want...I think I want to try it the other way first. I’ve obviously I’ve never, and maybe I won’t like it, but I want to try it with you.” His words tangled around my heart, were a knife slicing through me. I already felt, while also filling me up in the best kind of way. I didn’t just...that, didn’t think Griff would want me to fuck him. “Are you sure? It feels good having this thick rod inside me.” I thrust up against him.

“Do you usually...”

“Top? Yeah, but I bottom too, and it feels good. I’d love to bottom with you.” Griffin’s eyes darted away, so I said, “Hey, there’s nothing embarrassing about here. Not with me. Not ever, but especially not with you.”

“I’m curious,” he admitted. “If I don’t like it, I can always top you.” He said top like it was unfamiliar on his tongue. This wasn’t a conversation I had ever had to have with a lover.

I wanted him. I wanted him so damn bad, I was vibrating out of my skin with need, but I couldn’t do this, couldn’t go any further until I told him the truth. “Yeah, okay. Okay, I—fuck, I need to sit up for a second.”

Griff frowned, but he moved off me, and I sat up, legs over the side of the bed. My dick was already going soft as my thoughts spun out of control.

He moved over and sat beside me. “What’s going on? Did something happen?”

“No. Hell no. I just—Doug.”

Griffin tensed. “You have sex all the time, and now suddenly you’re not having sex with me because of him?” There was a sharp bitterness to his voice.

"I'm sure you're going to gloat plenty about that later, telling how awesome you are, but right now, I really need you to tell me about Doug. My mind is playing all sorts of games on me."

I nodded. He was right. I needed to. "I, um, everything I told you about a hand him—about us—is true. He came out of the accident with a traumatic brain injury. He had to have surgery. They didn't know if he would wake up and...and he didn't."

"Christ," Griff whispered. "I'm so sorry."

"Me too." I took a deep breath and continued. "It's like a coma and vegetative state. At first we hoped he would come out of it. I couldn't leave until I knew. Didn't leave for college. Nothing. I stayed and visited. I didn't stop, the whole time trying to hide who Doug really was to me. Eventually we realized he wasn't going to wake up. It's like, I know that, deep down, but I can't help wondering. His mom, she can't let go. It came back to Doug's mom and Doug's dad. They fight all the time. She keeps holding on, though I don't guess that's what you do when you love someone."

Griff's eyes darkened, a wild storm of intensity. "I guess you know around things make a bit more sense now—why you're holding on. You're holding on with him, and he's alive, and there's a chance."

The pain in his voice was a vise around my heart. Christ, this marriage. "Shh," never stop surprising me. "That's the thing, Griff. I will always love you, but I'm not in love with him. I'm not holding on for the reasons you think I should. I don't know how to let go, and I don't know how to deserve letting go because it was my fault. Why do I deserve to be happy when he's living in a hospital bed? But for the first time in my life, I want to try and let go. You promised me want to try."

"I do?" There was awe in his voice, like Griff was surprised my marriage could be true. Did he really not know how incredible he was? Since the beginning, I had been breaking my rules for Griff, changing because of what he did to me. I wasn't sure there was anything I wouldn't do for him.

"Yes. How do you not know that by now, Griffy? We really need to stop talking about making you a little cockier." It was a joke, and he gave me a small smile, but I didn't think either of us was really in the mood to be playful. I wrapped my hand around the back of his neck and tugged him closer. Our fore-

The truth was, no matter how much I'd loved Doug, he wasn't coming back to me. It was hard to wrap my brain around sometimes, because he was there, he was alive, and I had never worked through his accident or who we were to each other. I buried it deep inside and pretended to miss him as a friend instead of a lover. Then I moved on, keeping that part of me locked up, giving my body but not my heart. Now there was Griff, digging up my past and working his way around my defenses. Holding parts of me I thought I no longer had to give.

"We'll figure it out. Take it slow. Whatever we need to do. I just know I don't want to lose you."

"I don't want to lose you either," I replied.

My grip on the back of his neck tightened as raw need flooded me. I wanted to touch him, savor him, possess him in ways that were unfamiliar but urgent.

"Please," I said against Griff's lips before pressing a kiss there. "Please. I need you."

A deep growl reverberated from his chest and past his lips as Griff pressed them hard against mine, filled with hunger I could taste as he pushed me back on the bed, but I couldn't let go, couldn't manage not to touch him, and pulled Griff with me, until I was lying down and he was giving me his weight.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

Griffin

This wasn't the first time Josh had been beneath me, and I sure as hell it wouldn't be the last. I still had the whole night in my thoughts—telling myself I wanted him, that I wanted to know what it was like to have him inside. What he'd told me about Doug. The pain on his face. The way it felt when I held him as he cried.

I couldn't imagine what he'd been through. Just the thought made me twist an ugly hand around me. As if he could sense it, he said, "Don't go there. This moment is just for us. I don't want to share this with anyone else. All the other shit will be there waiting for us."

Yeah, that was what I needed too. I answered Josh with my lips pressed to his and my tongue in his mouth, our bodies moving and grinding together. I loved how hard he was, the feel of muscles and ridges beneath his skin. The way his cock felt when it rubbed against mine.

I wanted everything with Josh. Christ, I really fucking did.

"I want you to fuck me." I tested the words on my tongue as I pressed against him, our foreheads again pressed together. My pulse jumped with anticipation as I surrendered to the truth I'd hinted at earlier. Yes, I wanted to know what it felt like to be possessed by Josh. To know the feel of someone inside me, becoming a part of me in a way no one had ever been before.

Josh stared at me for a moment, then said, "Once I'm deep in this, I might never want out." He rubbed his hand down my back before settling on my ass cheek.

I smiled because it was the perfect response. I didn't want him to quit. I needed to know what it was like to have someone who understood my needs. I'd spent my life having sex I felt on a biological level and nothing more, not feeling that connection I needed to really desire someone. Now he did. Now that I had it, I wanted to hold on, needed to be trusted to have what I craved.

Maybe this sudden want didn't make sense to anyone else, but it made sense to me. I wanted to know what it was like to be fucked by Josh, and that there was to it.

“Let’s see how it goes this first time before we make any promises,” he teased.

“God, you are so fucking great,” he said before flipping us so I was on my back and Josh on top of me. “We’re gonna have to play around here a bit back there to get you ready. Just so you know, I’m about to rock your ass.”

Josh kissed me, then trailed his mouth down my neck, my chest, my stomach, licking, and sucking random spots along the way. He settled with his hands between my legs, his mouth close to my cock. Our eyes held each other’s as he used his tongue to travel root to tip along my erection. He sucked my crown, and I gasped, before his mouth traveled back down again. He sucked my balls, sucked them, then kept going.

His breath was hot against my taint when he said, “I’m gonna eat your hole until your damn brain melts. Gonna feast on you until you’re begging and begging for my cock to split you open.”

It was like an electric jolt shot through me. I arched off the bed, my fists clenched in the blankets, like he’d done more than just speak to me. “You know what that does to me. How much I love hearing you talk dirty to me.”

“Yes.” He kissed my inner left thigh. “I…” Then my right. “Do you want to taste my sac, which was already tight and full of come. “Roll over. I’ve been waiting to taste your ass.”

When he put it like that…hell, I couldn’t even find it in myself. I was embarrassed. I maneuvered myself around him so I lay on my belly, Josh on top of me, between my legs.

Strong hands splayed over my cheeks before he spread them, and I felt well, that was a little embarrassing. “Jesus, look at that hole.” Josh pressed his thumb against it with his thumb before rubbing it. It didn’t feel good or bad, well, at that point it was a finger on my asshole. “You ever played here?”

“Never.”

“Oh God!” I jerked when his wet tongue rasped over it. Josh did it again, and again, making my eyes roll back.

“Yeah.”

“What do you like, sweetheart? Tell me what you like so I know I keep doing.”

Shit, he was going to make me say it. I wanted his tongue back on my ass. I rolled my hips against the bed and said, “I like it when you lick my ass. It’s all good.” “There we go. That’s what I want to hear.” Josh’s face was between my ass cheeks again, licking and probing and driving me wild. My body was kissing, trembling. I fisted the pillows and rambled and begged for more. It is chestdamn salacious, but I was starving for it, wanted him to stretch me and fuck me and make me feel wanted and sexy and...his.

He kissed my ass. I actually groaned when he pulled back. He answered with a nibble on my ass. “I kissed your butt, his hair tickling it. “I’m just going to get lube and condoms from the bathroom so we’re ready.”

“Had this planned, did you?”

“I was hopeful,” he admitted. “Just didn’t think it would be going this way. I’m excited it is, though.”

He took my hands. I watched his ass as he walked over to his bag and dug around. He pulled out a bottle of lube and condoms, and set them on the bed before me. “I’ll be between my legs again.”

“I can’t believe I get to see you like this.” Josh kissed the small of my back. “I can’t believe you’re mine. Christ, I’m going to do everything I can to deserve you.”

“You already do.”

“Shh. I’m hungry.” He parted me again, kissed my hole, then licked it again. I lost my mind, dissolving into nothing but sensation. I thought about that, Josh. The places our bodies met, and what he was doing to me, and how he pressed against me. It made me feel.

I wasn’t sure how long he touched me, tasted me, savored me, when he pulled back exactly what it felt like he was doing. Josh was worshipping me, and I knew if that didn’t shoot me to the stars even more.

“God, I didn’t know. How could I not have known?” fell from my mouth, which a tumble of words.

“You know now. Let’s start getting you opened up some more.” He grabbed the lube, and my body automatically tightened slightly. “It’ll be good to you. You’re gonna fucking love it. Put a pillow under your hips so I can get to your ass a little better.”

I did as Josh said. I heard the click of the bottle, and then his we

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

Josh

The next couple of weeks went by with Griffin in my bed every night. I fucked him and held him and laughed with him. He'd talked to Kellan about renting out the house, and his brother was supportive. Griff talked about looking for his own place, but it was something we would mention in passing, and then it never happened. All his stuff except a portion of his clothes and daily toiletries was still at his place. At some point I knew I would find a house and completely move out of his, but I liked him in there. As long as he was officially still in the home he grew up in, I figured I would be spending most of his time with me.

We'd finished the model car together and started another one. He'd call me for lunch at work, or I'd call him to see what he wanted me to pick up from the store for dinner. We still told our friends we weren't serious and that we were just having fun, but I'd uninstalled Grindr from my phone, and he'd uninstalled it and neither of us made a big deal about it. On the surface, things hadn't really changed, but they had. We just weren't talking about it, and I knew that more than anything else, Griffin was giving me the time I needed to work through my shit. I just wished I had the first-hand experience of how to do that.

I wanted to, for him.

It was the Tuesday before Thanksgiving, which we'd all be spending with the Knox and Callum's. Knox's daughter, Charlie, would be in town. I knew her mom and sister were away at a retreat.

I was meeting Natalie and Callum for dinner. It didn't escape my attention that Kellan and I weren't spending as much time together as we usually did. As much as I hated to admit it, I thought both of us were going to screw up and hurt Griff, and we didn't know how to work that out between us.

We'd invited him tonight, of course, and maybe I was overthinking things, but he'd suddenly had something important he'd had to do Chase.

When I got to the hole-in-the-wall Mexican restaurant we loved, and Callum were already there, margaritas and a bowl of chips and salsa in front of them. Nat looked up at me and smiled as I slid into the booth beside her.

“I see you guys started without me,” I joked.

“You were late.” Callum popped a chip into his mouth.

“Five minutes.”

The waiter approached and asked me what I wanted to drink. I ordered

It was silly, but it felt weird to have margaritas in a group of three Kell—the three musketeers.

“What’s new with you guys?” I asked as I browsed the menu.

“Charlie gets here tomorrow. We can’t wait to see her. Y’all, crazy. I never saw myself as a father, but...”

“But you love it,” I said.

“I do. And I’m good at it. We’re like, Lumberjack Daddy and Nurp

Well, the kids don’t call us that. It’s a game we play in the bedroom.”

Natalie snorted margarita up her nose, and the three of us noticed, laughing.

“Seriously, I’m happy. Life is funny, huh? The way sometimes you think you ever would. That’s how I feel, at least. God, I’m sappy.”

Callum was right, though. Flashes of Griff’s smile filled my thoughts.

The way he looked at me when I was inside him, how we laughed together the way he trusted me, and supported me, and, yeah, I was happy too, found it in a place I never thought I would.

I cleared my throat. “What about you, Nat?”

“Nothing...well, unless you consider Miguel telling me he’s in love me as something new. Eek!” She wiggled beside me in excitement. “ great. I’ve never had a man treat me the way he does. When it’s right just know it’s right. And I feel that.”

taking over my damn thoughts again. Christ, it was right between us, it? Nat was correct. When you knew, you just knew.

“I’m happy for you.” I wrapped an arm around her, pulled her close, and Natalie kissed the top of her head.

“I’m happy for you too,” Callum said.

“Well, that makes three of us,” she teased, before they both looked expectantly.

Oh, right. It was my turn for an update, wasn’t it?

“Are you ready to order, or do you need more time?” The waiter asked. I took a beer down. I was quietly thankful for the reprieve. I got enchiladas, Callum got the same, and Callum ordered chicken street tacos.

The second he was gone, they were looking at me again. “What do you guys want me to say? You know Griff and I are…” Fuck. What did I say Griff and I were doing? It started out as friends with benefits, which I knew. It was what we continued to say, but I knew, down to the marrow in my bones, I knew there was more to us than that. I rested my elbows on the table, my face in my hands. “Ugh. I am so fucked.” With the bottom of my palms, I rubbed my eyes.

“Hey, what’s going on?” Natalie squeezed my thigh.

Jesus, this was hard. It also felt weird to do it without Kell, but the second I started talking to Kellan about it felt weird too. Talking to anyone about it because I didn’t know what to say. I’d never done this, and I felt worse about you finding yourself struggling with it all. It shouldn’t be this hard. Why was I falling for Griffin when I didn’t think it was hard for me?

I leaned back in the booth, picking at the label on my beer bottle, but my thoughts hadn’t even taken a sip of. “It’s more than it’s supposed to be—this mess together, with Griff, I mean.”

“Um…no shit?” Callum said. “It’s been there for a while. I just didn’t take the two of you longer to see it than the rest of us.”

“I agree with Callum. I don’t think any of us were surprised to find out you were seeing each other. Maybe in some ways it’s not supposed to be. He said sense. We all thought Griffin was straight, and you’re the king of hearts meant staying as far away from relationships as possible, which is so not surprising, you know.” I looked over at her. “I love you, but you’re not helping, Nat.”

She frowned. “Sorry. But my point is, despite those things that you and I mean you and Griff aren’t meant for each other, I think you are. I’m not sure we all know that, even Kell, who now might understand why this is a little hard on Griffin. It’s scary when the two people you love most use, and world fall for each other. You're afraid to lose them, you're afraid they'll break each other or break up, and you'll be in the middle of it. Wait, I'm getting off track, aren't I?"

He looked at me. "Yeah, sweets. I think so," Callum answered for me.

"It's not that easy, though. It's not as simple as saying I want to be with him and doing it."

I set my jaw. "Why not?" Natalie asked.

Natalie got up. "Maybe it should be. Or hell, maybe it was, but I was in denial. How do you think anyone ever knows how they would deal with something like this if they hadn't lived it?"

I even told her. "I'm falling for him, obviously, and I didn't want to do that. I know what they've done that in a long time, and I have some stuff in my past I have to get through, that I should have been working through for years, but I don't know how, and I didn't want to, and I feel guilty for even considering it. None of my know-nothings makes sense without all the details, but..." I shook my head. "I can't."

Callum looked at me with nothing but support. "But you're sharing your idea with Griff? So he knows."

He did. "Yeah. He's the only one I've ever told." I reached for my beer and took a couple of long swallows. "He makes me want things I didn't believe I'd ever want. I want to find a way to give him the world because he deserves it."

"But you don't feel like you deserve him," Natalie replied. I had to admit, she knew that, but it was true. "You do, Josh. I don't care what happened in your past. You deserve to be happy, and you deserve Griff."

"I think I believed I was happy until I had him."

"Then fight for him," Callum said. "I haven't been in Havenwood, but I feel like I know you. You're not one to give up easily. You're the only one everyone around you, for all your friends, the way Griff is. You're the only one who makes a guy, and you know what the right thing to do is. Whatever you need to do to get Griff, you'll make it happen."

"Griff." "Thanks, man." Thankfully, they showed up with our food then, and the conversation was over. Still, it wasn't far from my mind the rest of the night.

It should have been a pretty simple thing, but it was all about Griff. It was all about Griff. It was all about Griff.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

Griffin

“Are you sure we have to go? I mean, I’m not a fan of Thanksgiving a It’s really not something we should celebrate. I’d much rather stay in day.” I leaned over and lashed my tongue over one of Josh’s nipple pic He hissed as I kissed my way over his chest to do the same to the other

God, I loved touching him, exploring him, being naked with hi having Josh inside me. This, what we had, it was what intima supposed to be. That spark that was supposed to be there but never ha before. He made my skin buzz and my nerve endings come alive. The nothing in the world like it.

“First, I’m pretty sure I’ve created a monster. You’re like a sex now. You always want my cock.”

I kissed my way down his chest and abs. “It’s a great cock.” St tongue in his belly button. “I do think I want to fuck you at some poi too.” Kissed his glans, then down his erection.

The truth was, I was slightly nervous to switch things up. Sex wi was so different from any sex I’d ever had. I was afraid of losing fucking it up. Things worked the way they were, and I was enjoying out of it.

“You can fuck me anytime you want. I’ll go ass up for you right you want me to.”

He would. I knew it. Still, I kept traveling south, licked his nuts, them. “I like balls. Who knew I would like playing with someone el so much? It’s strangely fun.”

Josh barked out a laugh. “My balls are all yours. You can nuzzle t you want.”

I looked up at him from between his legs. “Good.” Then I did ju burying my face in his groin, inhaling Josh’s scent. “I don’t know w did to me. I went from not caring much about sex to wanting it all the Because it was with him. Because I was in love with him. Christ, I

I rolled my eyes. “Nice, Kell.”

“He speaks the truth.”

“I think I might have approached this conversation at the wrong time,” Remy said from behind me.

“No, you didn’t. Save me from these guys,” I teased, and the tension began to melt away, which was a relief since it definitely wasn’t

I wanted for today.

“Mary Beth, will you play Uno with me?” Charlie asked from the doorway.
“I’ll be right back.”

“Of course I will,” Callum’s mom replied. It was nice to see her in the living room. She looked happier than I’d ever seen her.

“She seems to be all about the grandma life.”

“She is!” Callum approached. “And...well, I helped her sign up for a dating site. She’s been talking to a woman who lives on the Eastern Shore. I was hoping it goes somewhere.”

Warmth spread through my chest. Everyone was falling into place the way they were supposed to be.

I looked over Remy to Josh. He smiled and winked, but I saw the corners of his eyes wrinkled the way they did when he was a little different. It wasn’t something I recognized until the past few weeks, but I felt like I’d seen it before. “You good?” I mouthed, and he nodded.

We stood around and chatted for a while. Knox and Callum went out there and forth to the kitchen a lot, preparing the meal. The rest of us all brought our own side dishes, but Knox made a turkey, and Callum made, in Knox’s words, “a healthy shit.”

Eventually, dinner was done. They’d set a long, folding table with chairs in the living room so everyone could fit. It was the only space big enough for all of us, this makeshift family we’d created together.

“You missed the clumpy cranberries,” Josh told me as I was making the turkey. “Don’t you really like those? I feel like you eat a shit ton of them every year.”

“Clumpy is much better than can-shaped, but yeah. I do like them. Do you know that?” My nose wrinkled. It was such a small thing. I could remember us ever making a joke about my love of cranberries, but he

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

Josh

I didn't know what was wrong with me.

I'd done well the rest of the evening at Knox's. We ate our meal, played a game of charades. We laughed and shit-talked and joked about language around little ears, before Logan made sure we knew he heard things in the school hallways than he ever did at home.

And it was almost perfect.

Too bad I felt like a fraud the whole time.

I was quiet on the way home. Quiet as I told Griff I was taking a shower. Went about my business to get ready for him because Griffin had said he wanted to fuck me at some point, and there was this gentle pulse deep inside me, telling me I needed it tonight. I'd never needed to be before. I'd wanted it. I'd enjoyed it. Mostly I wanted to be the one to fuck him but tonight I needed Griff inside me, which was likely at the crux of what was wrong.

It was getting a hell of a lot harder to deny the things I'd been trying to tell myself I didn't feel.

Once I was finished taking care of business and showering, I wrapped a towel around my waist and went to my room.

Griff sat on the edge of the bed, still wearing his jeans but no shirt. "Everything okay? You're being quiet."

"Not used to my big mouth being closed, huh?" It was stupid to joke right then. I could tell Griff felt the same when he rolled his eyes.

"I'm being serious."

"I know. Sorry." I should tell him I was in love with him, because I was. That I wanted him to be mine for real. For us to wake up together every day and for him to call this house his. For us to be like Chase and Remy and Law, or Knox and Callum. I had all these examples of relationships all around me, but I was stuck in the damn past. How do you get out of the past?

I didn't say any of those things, though. Instead I took the towel and walked over to him. I moved to straddle his lap, and Griff automatically walked farther back on the bed to make room for me. I had my knees on the mattress and my ass against the rough denim of his jeans. My arms wrapped around his waist, and one of my hands in his hair, before I leaned down and rubbed my face against his dark scruff.

"It's...hard for me. I didn't have real good examples of love when I was growing up. I've never been close to my parents. I always had what I needed physically, but they just...they weren't the kind of parents who hugged or kissed or said I love you, not to each other or me. I didn't really know how to show love until..."

"Until Doug," Griff finished for me.

And then I lost him, only he was still there too, and I hadn't wanted to open myself up for all that again. Until now. "I'm sorry."

"You can't change your past...but the future, the present, those are all yours."

Leaning back slightly, I looked at him. There was more Griff than I needed, but he didn't. Instead he ran his hands up and down my back, before he came back to my ass.

He said, "You make me crazy, you know that? Like I spent most of my life sleeping until you came in and woke me up. How does that work for you? Do you feel someone inside you in ways you don't with anyone else?"

I didn't know, but I felt the same with him.

"I need you." I kissed the corner of his mouth, then his neck. "Is that you?" I slid down to the floor until I knelt between his legs. My lips pressed against the skin of Griff's chest, down his abs, before I pushed him back. He was leaning on his elbows.

My fingers fumbled the button and zipper on his jeans, and Griff maneuvered himself until I got his jeans and underwear off. His eyes didn't look at me as I leaned forward and kissed his sac. "I like your balls too."

He laughed and rolled his eyes. "Shut the fuck up. Is that good or something else I never live down?"

"It's something I never want you to forget—how much you like me with my nuts. Maybe you like it so much, I'll wake up with your torso on my sac every day. You'll nuzzle down between my legs and make off and home there.”

ally sat “Jesus Christ.” Griffin thrust his hips gently. He was rock hard, his mattress, fat and tall and proud. “I love it when you talk to me like that.”

nd him, I stroked his shaft, licked the pearl of precome from his slit. “Cheek, you’ll like it when I tell you I need you. That I want this thick piece of me to split me open, to own my hole. Show me how much you want me now. I was Take what’s yours.”

needed A deep growl was my response as Griff grabbed me and pulled me toward him. We kissed and rolled around on the bed until I had my head on the pillows and Griff was on top of me.

His mouth left mine and went to my nipple. “I think you did this to me. It’s my favorite toy.”

nted to “What about my balls?” He answered with a nip of his teeth, piercing that made me arch off the bed. “Fuck yes.”

re up to We kissed again, teeth clashing, tongues tangling, moan-swallowing kisses. Griff circled his hips, making his cock rub against mine. I arched toward him, wanting him everywhere at once, needing every part of his eyes, once.

settling “Roll over,” he gritted out but didn’t give me time to do it myself. He flipped me so I was on my stomach, and his hands went to the globes of my ass, kneaded them. “Fuck...I want you. So damn bad, but...”

How? I stilled beneath him, looking over my shoulder. “I don’t want you to do anything you don’t want to do. If this isn’t what you want, or you’re not ready, or—”

“I need you.” “I want you. I want you so damn bad, it’s killing me. I just—slightly moved probably sounds stupid, but I spent my whole life doing the fucking work so whenever I felt like being with you does. What if I’m just not cut out for it another way, or not good at it, or this somehow screws up what I want to let me be between us?”

It’s not stray Jesus, this man was going to fucking wreck me. “You’ll be good.”

There’s no doubt in my mind about that. I’m sure you left all your young women and lovers satisfied.” He nodded, and jealousy burned through me. Damn, the idea of Griff with anyone else but me. “It won’t be the same because it’s us and we’re different together, which can only make it more intriguing but if you want to hold off, we hold off. Sex is supposed to be what you want a little.”

“It is.” Griff kissed the top of my spine, then kept going, pressing his cockmouth down, down, down until he got to my ass. “You’re right. It’s u makes it special already.” He reached over and plucked the lube ‘Maybecandom from the nightstand. “Get up on your hands and knees for me. of meat “Are you sure?”

Griff. Griff grabbed my ass again, spread my cheeks, and hissed. “I’d hav crazy not to want to. I’m gonna take what’s mine.” Heat flared to lif led meeyes, and damned if it didn’t make my dick twitch.

Griff wet his fingers with lube and spread some over my hole. I tre my eyes falling closed. This obviously wasn’t the first time I’d expe just forthis, but knowing it was him made it feel that way.

He started with one finger. It had been a while for me since I bo to mybut it only took a couple of minutes before I begged, “Give me anothe

When he pulled his fingers out, I groaned in response.

“Yeah, okay. I want to see you too.”

I lay on my back as Griffin suited up. He drizzled more lube nit, thiscondom-covered erection, and I spread my legs for him, held them bac , and itcould get me at the right angle.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

Griffin

I'm home.

Ok...thanks for letting me know. You didn't have to leave. I wish you hadn't to talk to you.

I need to figure some things out.

I'd been staring at the texts Josh and I sent on and off all night. I slept for shit. Every time I closed my eyes, my thoughts journeyed to him: the way he felt beneath me, being inside him, the words that had come from my lips. I love you. Jesus, I'm so goddamned in love with you.

They were true, of course. It was something I'd already acknowledged myself, but it hadn't been something I wanted to say to him. Josh was ready. I'd told him I was on the same page as he was. Hell, the first person I'd enjoyed sex with and had a fling with, and I'd gone and fallen in love with him. What a mess.

I was in the backyard, on the porch. It was early, just after seven. The morning was foggy, the air thick with moisture as a cool breeze made its way on my arms and stand on end. My cell was in my hand. I kept flipping it over before I made a call and held it up to my ear.

"Griff? What's wrong?" Kellan answered.

"Nothing. I just..." Just couldn't finish. Just didn't know what to say. "Nothing. I'm sorry I called so early."

"Are you at home?"

"Yeah."

"I'll be right there, big brother." He hung up before I could argue with him. The thing was, I didn't think I would have. It was why I'd called, wasn't it? I needed my brother.

I didn't move from my spot. It wasn't long until I heard a car pull into the driveway, then Kellan in the house before he was coming out the back door.

"I brought coffee." He handed me a paper cup from the coffee shop. "I brought coffee." He handed me a paper cup from the coffee shop.

“Thanks.”

“What’s wrong?” Kellan sat in the chair beside me. It took me a moment to reply, but he didn’t push, just sat there and waited until I was ready. It was good like that, good in ways I didn’t think people always gave him credit for.

Finally, it could have been a minute or an hour later, I said, “I’m with Josh.”

t. I’d like “Oh...wow...I guess I’m not surprised. I figured you were halfway there to have even started this with him. That’s why...”

That was why he’d been unsure. Because Kellan knew I would love Josh and that Josh wouldn’t feel the same. He’d told me he was trying but hadn’t did’n’t know how far that went. If love was a step too far.

back to “Did you tell him?”

spilled “Yeah...” I nodded. “Didn’t really mean to. I’d planned to keep myself, but I was a bit lost in the moment. I think I made a rookie mistake. Telling someone you love them for the first time in the middle of a fight with someone who’d already told you they didn’t have that to give. How person I was that?”

ve with “Okay, I’m assuming I know what you mean by that, but I’m still not to think about the fact that you and Josh are having sex.”

en. The “Now you see how I’ve felt this whole time.” I cocked a brow at him. The hair he smiled.

ver and “That’s beside the point.”

“Of course it is.” That’s what he always said about it.

to say. “I finished and left.”

“Oh, ew.” We chuckled, and it was nice to have that moment of relief right then. “But he let you leave? I can’t fucking believe he let you leave going to kill him.”

ue with “Don’t. It’s not his fault.”

wasn’t “I’m pretty sure it is.”

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

Josh

I'd had to pull over when Griffin called.

After he hung up, I got myself under control and hit the road again. My hands were shaking, and I figured that was part coffee and part Griffin Christ, what he did to me. He got me all tangled up, and yet not a part of me wanted to be free.

"I don't want to lose you, but I...I need more. Eventually I'm going to need more. I deserve more."

He really did deserve everything, and I wanted to be the man who could give it to him. I had to find a way to be that man. It was more than just deserving it. I did too.

I didn't stop again until I was parking in the lot at the facility where I lived. Elbows on the steering wheel, I rubbed my face, trying to wake up a bit. Or hell, maybe I was just trying to get myself ready for what I was about to do.

What I had to do. What I should have done a long time ago.

Say goodbye.

I got out of the car, pulled Griff's turtle out of my pocket, and held it as I went into the building. It was a long-term care facility. I was on the list of approved visitors, so I gave my ID to the older woman sitting at the desk. She told her who I was there to see.

She smiled and gave me a name tag. "Have a good day."

"I'm trying," I replied.

I knew the way to Doug's room by heart. I walked in, and there he was, as he'd been for twelve years.

Twelve. Fucking. Years.

He was hooked up to the machines keeping him alive, and had a blue blanket over him. He was skinny, so damn gaunt, and seeing him that way made pain lash through my chest. He looked older but the same to me. I wondered what he would think if he saw me.

There were photos all over the room—of Doug, of his family, of them together. Smiling and laughing and secretly in love.

I closed the door.

My legs were weak, like they weren't strong enough to hold me together. I walked over and sat in the chair beside his bed. I took his hand, Griffin's hand, and it was warm, so warm, so alive, even though his body parts weren't.

“Hey, you. Sorry it's been so long since I came to visit.” There was no movement, nothing that he could hear me or knew I was there, but I believed he could and that I believed he would.

“Things have...they've been going well. The gym is great. My son, Kellan, remember I told you about him? He proposed to his boyfriend. They're getting married, and our friend Natalie is going to be a surrogate for them. I'm still not sure if I ever want kids. I know you always did.” My hand tightened.

“You would have been a great dad.”

He would have been the best dad, spouse, friend.

“I, um, I met someone. Well, I've known him for a while. He's my older brother, Griffin? I've told you about him before too. God, you love him. He's more serious than me, like you always were. Keaton grounded that way, I guess. But we, um...we started seeing each other while back. It was supposed to be just like everyone else, ya know? Fun, some sex. But I'm pretty sure I knew from the start it would be more than that. I know I did.”

My eyes were blurry, filling with tears. Every time I wiped them away, more took their place. This was hard. Fuck, this was so goddamned hard. I wished Griffin was here with me, helping me through it. That's how I was doing the right thing.

“I'm in love with him. I know I promised you I'd never do that. I won't wait for you or stay single because I loved you, Christ, I loved you so much. I still do, but I love him too. And that feels like such a big betrayal to you. We were supposed to be together. We were supposed to be happy, and that was taken away from us. I hate that every day, Doug, but God, I love him. And he deserves for me to be able to love him with you. I deserve it too.”

My voice kept breaking. I could hardly see him, I was crying so hard. My hand was hurting, I held him so tightly, but I couldn't let go, c him and ease up. “You deserve better than you got, but there’s nothing I can do about that. I can’t change it. I’d trade places with you if I could, but I can’t want to be happy. I want to be happy so fucking much, and that feels like I can’t be. But I don’t know how to live without him, Doug’s turtledon’t think...I don’t think you’d want me to, so I’m here because I have to and I have to find a way to let you go. Not completely. Never completely. You will always be my best friend. You will always be the first person I’ll love. I’ll always love you, but I’m in love with him, and I have to tell you I’m going back on my promise. I have to be honest about that, if I could, I’d hope to move forward with him. Please understand. I’m sorry. I’m so sorry to my friend.”

I lost it then, unable to hold back as I cried. I leaned over the bed, I grabbed their hands, kissed them.

I cried for the loss of him. For the loss of us.

I cried because the world was robbed of one of the best people I’ve ever known. Someone who was strong and loving and always did the right thing. Someone who was serious but knew how to laugh, someone who loved me fiercely.

I cried because Doug would have changed the world. He had changed me. I cried because I had lost a part of myself.

I didn’t know how long I sat there with him. Eventually there were no more tears left, but the ache still sat heavy in my chest.

I didn’t leave the chair. I held his hand and talked to him. I recounted stories from our childhood, asked him if he remembered certain things. I talked hard. I told him more about Griffin and our friendship. I talked about new music I thought he would like, and classic movies I loved and how they remade some of them but they didn’t hold a candle to the originals.

I talked until my voice was raw.

With each word, each laugh, I was healing inside. I would never stop loving him in some ways. I would never totally walk away from him. I do, always check in and always come to visit, but somehow I felt the change. Things were transforming.

I felt like I’d been asleep, like I’d lived half a life, fucking and joking around, pretending everything was okay, but I’d been holding myself back, couldn’t let myself up.

Doug wasn't ever sure, though, until I noticed the way things changed between the two of you. Subtle touches, the way you looked at each other when you read. "I thought no one was watching. He was in love with you."

And soon, I looked down, closed my eyes. She knew. All this time, I couldn't believe she knew. "I was in love with him too."

At the time, "I know. It made sense to me back then, why I didn't say anything. I wanted the two of you to come out on your own terms, or hell, maybe I was just saving myself. Maybe I was putting my best interests above my own. I'll always wonder, and I'll always regret it. But I don't know why I didn't tell you I knew after his accident. Maybe because I was ashamed of the thing. I was afraid of coming out...that I let him carry that burden. That I wasn't ready to be a mom."

"He loved you. He loved you so damn much, and he knew you loved him. He didn't worry about you. He worried about his dad."

"I still should have done something about it."

"Maybe," I answered honestly. "But hindsight is twenty-twenty. I should have known, and you loved him. That's what matters."

As we were, We were quiet for a moment, each coming to terms with our own thoughts. It was me who spoke first. "I fell in love again. I couldn't, not with Doug still alive. I felt too guilty. Like I was betraying him. I loved him so much, at first I still only wanted him, and then I wasn't sure I could open myself up that way again, but it just happened, and I might have ruined it. Because I couldn't... It was still too hard. That's why I'm here. I needed to tell him. I needed to say goodbye."

More than Annie reached over and grabbed my hand. "You listen to me. You want your son happy. He thought the sun rose for you. He loved you so much. In this world, there is nothing in the world he would want more than your happiness. He would want you to love someone. He wouldn't want you to hold on forever. He wouldn't want you to live in his memory. He would want you to be free...and he would want that for himself too."

Maybe not My hands started shaking. I thought I'd cried all my tears, but then more, these a slow trickle down my face. I knew what she meant, but I didn't know, though I knew, I asked, "What do you mean?"

CHAPTER THIRTY

Griffin

I forced myself to go to work that evening. I knew I didn't have to, but I would have taken care of it, but I also knew myself well enough to not drive myself crazy if I didn't. I needed to get into my routine, be around familiar and distract myself from the deep-seated pain in my chest.

It didn't surprise me when Kellan and Chase came in, then Natal Law and Remy, and Knox and Callum. My friends. My family. They were offering support, even though I knew Kellan wouldn't have told them the details. He would have said I needed them, and he would have been right.

And they'd come.

"Thanks, guys," I said as I handed them all beers.

"Nothing to thank us for, brother," Chase replied.

"Just don't...don't let this fuck up our group, okay? It's not his fault, it is just the way it is, but I couldn't stand it if this screwed us up or if Josh hurt by it." He couldn't change that part of him that wouldn't let him be hurt. Maybe that meant he just...didn't, and I needed to acknowledge that.

I still couldn't believe it had only been last night that we'd been together that I'd told him I loved him. It felt like a world of things had changed then.

Hours went by. The bar was unusually slow for a Friday night. It was close to eleven, and there were only about fifteen or so other people besides my friends. My eyes kept snagging on Grumpy Bear all night long. Every time they did, another pang hit my chest. "Listen, guys, you don't need to hang out here all night. It's late. You did your part. You can head out."

I had a feeling they would say no, but the door opened then, and I turned to look. Josh stood there, and he looked...exhausted. His hair was a mess, and he was wearing the clothes he'd worn the day before. His eyes were red, dark circles beneath them, but he stared straight at me, and he was still the most beautiful person I'd ever seen.

The bar went on around me, everyone talking and laughing, not being a "Took him with you? Where did you go?"

I sure as shit wasn't going to turn down that offer. "Let's go home, too. HeJosh.

Josh told me that "I'll tell you at home."

"Okay." It was a rushed goodbye to everyone. Josh and Kellan I was trying to tell Josh whispering something in his ear. I knew they would eventually talk.

Josh told me "I'm going to leave my car here. I don't want to be away from you. I admitted when we got outside, and all it did was make me love him more."

"I don't want that either."

Josh pulled up. We didn't talk in the truck, like we both knew it wasn't the time to talk, they wanted to wait until we got home.

Josh said, "I'm not even though the drive took only a couple of minutes, it felt like eternity before we got to Josh's house."

Josh and I got out and went straight for each other again, hugging and stumbling our way to his door. When we got inside, he cupped my face.

"Christ, I love you. I want to keep saying it over and over. I didn't think I'd love you most ever..."

Josh said, "I didn't think he'd ever have this again."

Josh said, "I didn't think I'd ever have it at all."

"We're quite the pair, aren't we?"

Josh and I said, "We're a sexy-as-fuck couple, is what we are."

Josh smiled. I chuckled the way he always made me do. "I love you too, but I know."

Josh said, "I should have told you sooner. Josh motioned toward the couch. We went over and sat down. He said, 'I love you,' his eyes, and I felt it then, the pain radiating off him, but when he opened his eyes to look at me, I saw the resolve too, the clarity."

Josh said, "I went to see Doug. I needed to tell him about you...and I needed to tell you. I said goodbye to him."

"Jesus, Josh, I—"

"Please, let me. I need to get this out."

Josh said, "I nodded, and he continued."

"I'd promised him I wouldn't fall in love again. I know that"

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

Josh

“Hey, man. How’s it going?” Chase asked when I arrived at their home the next morning. He was heading out with Bowie, I figured to give Kellan some space.

“Good. You?”

“Doing good, brother.” Chase nodded. “I’m happy for you. You’re a Griff. In the strangest way, it makes sense. I don’t know what happened in your past, but you did good. It’s not always easy to get over what’s happened to us. If there’s anyone who knows that, it’s me.” He was talking about my dad, I was sure of it. “But those damn Caine brothers...they make us vipers, don’t they?”

I smiled, feeling the connection between Chase and me deepen. I knew what it was like to be best friends with one Caine brother and with the other one. They were irresistible and incredible in every way. “They really do.”

Chase clapped me on the shoulder before he and Bowie went down the stairs and to his truck.

I waited until he drove away, then raised my hand to knock. The door pulled open before I had the chance, and Kellan was there. He stepped forward and wrapped his arms around my shoulders, mine enclosing around his. I relaxed into him and let out a heavy breath. I’d needed this. I needed Kellan. The way he hugged me told me everything was going to be okay.

“I love you. I’m sorry I haven’t made sure you know that since you went down,” Kellan said close to my ear.

“Hey, I know. I love you too, babe. I never doubted that.” And I wasn’t not really. Sure, things had been different, but Kellan and I were brothers in life.

There were still important things we had to discuss, though, things I should have told him a long time ago.

He nodded and let me go. The two of us went to the couch and sat

“No.” He shook his head. “You don’t. If you want to, I’m here, I don’t have to.”

“I want to.” Doug deserved that. He deserved to be talked about, story to go on.

“Then I want to hear.”

We said our goodbyes after that, and I climbed into Griff’s tru headed for home. We’d still need to take me back to the bar to get ; hit melater, but as far as I was concerned, that could wait. I just wanted to time with him.

Griffin was sitting on the couch when I got home. “How’d it go?”

always “I want you too,” Griff replied, and then we were kissing, kissing. He’s stumbling into the bedroom, pulling each other’s clothes off as we were.

I pushed him down to the bed, knowing Griff liked it when I got rough and bossy with him. “You gonna give me your hole?”

His cock jerked against his belly. “Fuck yes. Always. And never’s how talking to me like that.”

“I don’t plan on it.”

I grabbed the lube and a condom.

“Do we need that?” Griffin asked.

“No. I’m tested regularly. I’m negative.”

“Me too. I really want to feel you come inside me,” Griff admitted. “I’m damned if hearing that didn’t make my balls tighten even more.”

“I want that too.”

I lay down on top of him. We kissed and touched, rutting together, wandering, mapping out each other’s bodies.

I lubed my fingers, pushing one inside him, before Griff said, “Fuck, I need more,” as he arched toward me.

I went from two fingers to three. When he was writhing and begging for more, I pulled him up. “On your knees. Grab the headboard. You’re gonna need something to hold on to.”

“So fucking cocky.” Griff reached out and stroked my shaft. My body started vibrating.

“You do that, and this is going to be over before it starts.”

“We wouldn’t want that. I thought you were some kind of sex legend something.”

“Yeah, but you bring me to my knees, Griff. Don’t you know now?”

“Jesus.” Griff scrambled up and positioned himself like I’d said.

He pushed his ass out, and I rubbed a hand over his muscular chest. I still couldn’t believe we were there, that Griff gave me this.

I lubed up, both my erection and him. “I have a feeling this is going to be over quickly,” I admitted.

“I must be good at this.”

“I’m so cocky now.”

Griff looked over his shoulder. My chest pressed against his back. Our mouths pulled together as if we couldn’t stop them as I began to w

EPILOGUE

Griffin

Eighteen Months Later

“It’s still hard to believe, isn’t it?” Josh asked as he pulled his car up to the driveway of Kell and Chase’s.

My heart swelled, this strange twitch in my chest. It was hard to believe. My little brother, the guy who’d struggled growing up in Havenwood, who hadn’t had a lot of friends, was married and a father. I rubbed a hand over my heart. I wished our parents were alive to see it. “Yeah, it is.”

Josh shut off the car. “Hey, you okay, sweetheart?” I turned in my seat and took him in, this beautiful man who’d changed my whole damn life. Who’d shown me what passion was, who’d made me realize I could love. We’d been living together for a year. We were in bed together every night. Sometimes we drove each other crazy, but hell, what couple isn’t? Every once in a while? All I knew was I was so damn lucky to be with him.

He winked. “You’re all right.”

“Funny man.”

He leaned over and kissed me. “Let’s go see our niece.”

It wasn’t the first time we’d seen her. Josh and I had been at the hospital when Natalie went into labor. Kellan, Chase, and Miguel had all been in the room with her, while I paced the waiting room like a crazy person and they tried to keep me calm. They’d come home yesterday, though, and even now we were heading to their place to meet her today.

We climbed out of the car just as Knox, Callum, Logan, and Remy pulled up, followed by Law and Remy.

“Do you think you and Dad will have more kids?” I heard Chase ask Callum.

Callum wrapped an arm around her. “Nope, we already have two.”

“We are pretty awesome, aren’t we?” the little girl replied, and laughed. She was a handful, that one.

Carol and Charlie had moved into my house last summer, as p Charlie was in school in Havenwood and loving it. She still lived pr with Carol, and Logan with Knox and Callum, but they spent a lot of each other’s places.

“Do you want kids?” Logan asked Law and Remy.

“I think we’re all just going to spend a lot of time spoiling the two in front and the little girl inside that house,” Remy told him, and I had no d was right.

“She is,” Kell replied. “Everyone, meet Destiny Sue Caine.” Her name was after our mom.

Chase stood, and the group of us crowded around them. She was had only been seven pounds at birth, then lost a few ounces, but was gaining them back. Her little eyes were looking around, like they were ospitalto focus on all of us, her cheeks fuller than the rest of her was.

Charlie “I’m still all hair, Dad,” he replied, and we chuckled.

“I didn’t know it was possible to love someone so much.” Chase l rlie askhis lips over her forehead. “Especially when they mostly just eat, poop and yell at me.”

of you When she began to fuss, Kellan asked me, “Do you want to feed her? Doubt he Uncle Griff?”

My pulse kicked up. “Please.”

Chase gave me the baby while Kellan made a bottle. I sat in the armchair in the corner of the living room. Natalie looked at me and smiled. She’d had fairly easy labor from what they said. What did I know? Having Kellan sound hard as hell no matter what.

she was She and Miguel would be getting married later this year. I’d asked her to plan on having kids of their own, but she said they weren’t in a hurry. They just wanted to enjoy each other and love on their new little niece. Kellan hadn’t used Natalie’s eggs, and there’d been discussions about her and Destiny’s life; they all decided Auntie Nat was what they felt most comfortable with.

middle Kellan brought me the bottle, and I put it to her mouth. Destiny started on right away, and I watched her eat as if it was the most amazing thing so tiny, the world.

already In a lot of ways, it was.

trying I sat there thinking about our parents, about life, as everyone talked among themselves. When we were kids, I never would have expected to have seen this as the life we all lived. Kellan married Chase. Me having a job. The strong, loyal group of friends around us...and Josh.

was the My gaze darted up, and he was looking at me. He winked. God, I loved him. The turtle he gave me poked into my thigh. I still kept it with me every day. The only time I didn’t was the day when we went to say goodbye to Doug. Josh had needed it then.

, sleep, Seeing him had been hard on both of us. Josh had talked to his parents, introduced us, and before we left, I gave them some time together. They stayed in a hotel that night because I didn’t want to have to spend time driving. Josh needed me, and there was nowhere I wanted to be more than half the wanted to be there for him, just like he was with me.

Doug had passed away, and we made a vow to go to the cemetery to visit him once a year. Like Josh said, he deserved to be remembered.

“You okay?” He knelt beside me.

“Me too.”

Destiny fell asleep, so I handed the bottle to Josh, who stayed by her, watching her with me. I wasn't sure if Josh and I would ever get married and have kids. We didn't know if that was for us, but you didn't have to have someone or have babies with them to love them with your whole damn heart. Happy endings were unique for everyone, and only time would tell.

“It came true,” I said after a little while.

“What did?”

“My dream. Remember when I told you about the tattoo and how I felt if they know what my dream was? It was you...all this.”

“You don't even know what you do to me. You made mine come true. They too.”

“I know.” And I really did.

Destiny was so sweet, so small in my arms. I knew I should put her in a crib, but I didn't want to let her out of my sight. Soon, Kellan made her latch over. Josh kissed the baby, then me, before heading over to our friends. They were all gathered on the other side of the room.

“She's perfect, Kell,” I told him.

“She is. Chase is great with her too. He wants so much to be better than what he had, better than his parents were, but he doesn't see that he can't be this, have it in him not to be. He's too good a man.”

“Yeah, he is. Mom and Dad would be so proud of you.”

“They'd be proud of you too.”

I loved Destiny didn't sleep long. It was as if she didn't want to miss a moment. Callum and Knox held her for a while, then Remy, then Law, then me. I wasn't sure this baby would ever be put down.

When she was back in Kellan's arms, I noticed Law was gone. He was back in with Remy's guitar.

“I, um, wrote a song for her,” Remy said. “Can I play it?”

“Of course,” Kell replied.

Remy had sung at Kellan and Chase's wedding as well. Once in a
